A Few News Items. She Would Pardon 2,000. Suppose Britain Says No. Dictators Get Results.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CLOSE TOGETHER, in one newspaper, you read these items, on a happy Sunday morning:

"Four Rob Post Offices. Bandits Disarm Worker, Herd Him With Three Others in Wash-Room."

"Killing in Auto Laid to Beer Gang."

"BANDITS GET $17,110 On New Jersey Bus. Shoot Hole in Roof, Slug Bank Messenger, Cow 15 Passengers, Driver, With Revolver Pressed Against Head by One of Pair of Bandits, Speeds Through Union City."

AND THERE are at least 100 other, similar "news items" in one day's news. Our crime is a disgrace to the nation, and, born of bootlegging, covers the entire country.

It has become an issue considerably more important than prohibition.

AN EXCITING, BITTER contest for governor, in Texas, interests the rest of the country.

Mrs. Ferguson, former governor, whose husband is also a former governor, ran against Ross S. Sterling, newspaper publisher of Houston.

Mr. Ferguson told his audience they would have "two governors for the price of one," meaning that he would help his wife govern.

Mrs. Ferguson promised that she would pardon all imprisoned violators of the prohibition law. This pledge to release 2,000 convicts as a vote getting measure shows that Texas is not unanimous for prohibition.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE agree to work for a restriction in war expenses as well as in the size of armaments. Britain fears that economies agreed on at the London parley may be lost in the effort to get more expensive QUALITY in armaments while limiting QUANTITY.

POOR OLD BRITAIN finds herself more tightly pinched for money than the French, or even the Italians, or at least, less willing to spend it.

"We've got the men, we've got the ships, we've got the money, too," must be rewritten to leave out "money."

IF BRITAIN decides to limit cost, as well as SIZE of armaments, and we obediently "string along," as usual, we shall not have much armament.

Our patriots do not give their dear government very much for a dollar. One billion in Europe will easily buy, in real defensive value, as much as two billions here.

WE, OF COURSE, "have got the money" now. But, what if Britain should send for a gathering of our mush and milk experts from Washington, and tell them we must not SPEND THE MONEY, BECAUSE THEY, THE BRITISH, CANNOT AFFORD IT.

A DICTATORSHIP, while it lasts, creates efficiency. You see it in the French revolution, men in stovepipe hats dominating the battle fields of Europe. You see it in the careers of Cromwell and Napoleon.

AND YOU SEE it again today in Russia, Italy and Turkey, three nations progressing amazingly, because dictatorship and revolution sweep aside tradition.

AT THE GREAT Belfast automobile race on Saturday, three Italian racers came in first, second and third, two Britishers fourth and fifth. Several Britishers and no Italians were injured in the race.

MUSSOLINI TAKES personal charge of Italian industries and tells his people they must never be satisfied with what they have accomplished.

IN ADDITION, men of Latin blood seem to do certain dangerous and difficult things better than Northerners, which is sad for proud Nordics.

The German winner of last year's race was barred out this year because his supercharger was a fraction of an inch too big, therefore not standard.

And that German's name is Caracciola, showing Latin blood there.

THE ROCKEFELLER foundation announces that psittacosis, or "parrot fever," resembles a mild attack of yellow fever.

Ladies with pet parrots should know that "man probably contracts the disease by way of the nose and mouth." Burying your face in the soft feathers of a parrot is dangerous. And that is true of the feathers, or fur of any animal.

BRITISH SCIENTISTS say our earth is sometimes surrounded by a ring of electricity, as Saturn is surrounded by rings.

Our occasional "ring" causes electric storms that upset cable, telegraph and radio operations and may be responsible for tornadoes.

TORNADOES TRAVEL slowly. If you think one is coming, remember that your automobile can save you. The weather bureau says tornadoes travel, always, in a straight line, usually in a northeast or southeast direction, always toward the east.

Put your family in the car and start at right angles to the tornado. Do not run away ahead

FLIERS BEAT FOG, REACH HALIFAX

German Crew to Take Off For New York Tomorrow if Weather Conditions Permit

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The seaplane D-1422, carrying Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his crew of three from Germany to New York, arrived here today after a one-stop flight from Queensport.

The fliers, who had landed at the fishing village of Marie Joseph, 75 miles east of Halifax, this morning to make sure of their directions in a dense fog, took off again at 12:15 p. m., guided by a pilot plane of the Halifax Flying Club, and reached this city a few minutes before 1:30.

Fuel and supplies awaited the German crew here. They plan to start for New York tomorrow, if practicable.

Nova Scotia Reached After Stiff Battle

QUEENSPORT, N. S., Aug. 25.—(INS.)—The Dornier-Wal flying boat, numbered the D-1422, reached Queensport yesterday after battling its way through storm and fog, landing 130 miles from Halifax as a precautionary measure.

The fliers' charts failed to give details of the route to this city and the heavy fog made blind flying hazardous.

Von Gronau, mysterious and as reticent about his plans as on the day he left Germany on a supposed practice cruise to the Orkneys, modestly admitted his intention of continuing to Halifax.

Wife Helps to Jail Jack Clifford, Dancer

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Jack Clifford, dancer, former husband of Evelyn Nesbit, is in Moyamensing Prison today in default of $800 bail because of charges of disorderly conduct.

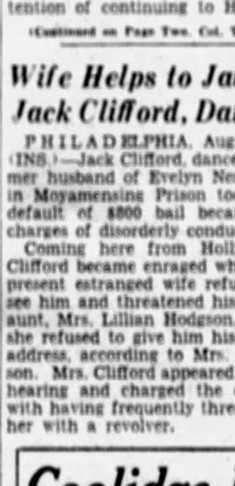
Coming here from Hollywood, Clifford became enraged when his present estranged wife refused to see him and threatened his wife's aunt, Mrs. Lillian Hodgson, when she refused to give him his wife's address, according to Mrs. Hodgson. Mrs. Clifford appeared at the hearing and charged the dancer with having frequently threatened her with a revolver.

Coolidge Lauds France For Economic Revival

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 25.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The economic strength of the world has been greatly increased in the past five years by the revival of the financial power of the French government. So late as 1925, while its people enjoyed considerable prosperity, the government finances were in an uncertain condition. The franc was fluctuating, mostly downward, unsettling foreign exchange. The budget was not balanced. Large sums had to be borrowed; government securities were low and interest high. Great expenditures and debts had been incurred in anticipation of reparations which had not arrived. Yet Americans like Ambassador Herrick, who knew France, did not lose confidence. They remembered the Marne. A great people under the great leadership of Poincare was able to fund its debts, stabilize its franc, balance its budget, recall its foreign balances, fill the Bank of France with gold and send its bonds well above par. In a short time France has become one of the great assets of the financial world. No one can estimate the future resources of a country that is willing to work, save and face facts.



Calvin Coolidge

The rest of the world, including ourselves, may well take renewed courage from this example. It justifies our faith in mankind.

41 DIE IN INDIA WARFARE

SIMLA, India, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A British army captain was shot to death and 41 other British and native fighting men have been in a hand-to-hand encounter on the Bannu-Kohat road in the Kurram region of the northwest frontier province, according to an official report made public today.

Fazal Oadar, an Afghan Mullah, leader of the hostile force, was so seriously wounded that he died shortly after. Eight fighting men of the British company were killed and 10 injured; 32 Athi Khel Wazirs were slain, 14 were wounded and 70 taken prisoner in the most important engagement in Peshawar province in recent days.

The British forces, comprising a platoon of infantry which the slain Britisher was accompanying, was drawn into the battle when one of the tribesmen shot down Capt. Ashcroft from behind while the captain was engaged in an argument with one of the foemen.

Ashcroft was killed instantly. Seeing him fall the British force closed in upon the Afridis and a fierce conflict at close range occurred.

LEAP IN DARK SENDS THIEF TO DEATH

Prowler Misses in Jump of Four Feet From Roof to Near Building; Falls 60 Ft.

Failing to leap a four-foot area between two buildings of the William Zoller Company packing plant, 359 Spring Garden avenue, an alleged robber identified as Ben F. Wickline, 30, early today was killed in a 60-foot fall in the darkness.

His body was found on a cement walk. Wickline had been dead several hours. He had suffered a skull fracture and crushed leg. Police were seeking his home address.

A pair of shoes was found near the scene. The victim was in his stocking feet.

BREAKS WINDOWS

A second floor window leading off a hillside adjoining the Zoller plant had been broken, according to police. It was believed Wickline had entered the building and proceeded to the fourth floor, where a window leading to a roof was broken.

The death leap resulted in an effort to jump to an adjoining roof, police said, though it would have been possible to have stepped to that building from another part of the structure.

The Puritan Paint and Oil Company, of 1306 Sheffield street, North Side, was held up this morning by two highwaymen, who, after forcing an employe to open a safe for them, escaped with approximately $6.

WANT JOB—THEN MONEY

Amor Lorentz, of 1819 Buena Visia street, told police that the men entered his office and asked for employment.

Refused, they walked toward the entrance, then suddenly whipped revolvers from their pockets and ordered him to open the safe.

After that safe was opened they demanded that Lorentz open another safe in an adjoining office, but he refused, saying he didn't know the combination.

The bandits then took his wallet, containing no money, and departed.

New York Broker Indicted in Larceny

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—William E. Willard, broker, whose firm has branches in nine New York cities and in Washington, Chicago and San Francisco, was indicted on a charge of grand larceny today by a county grand jury.

Mrs. Mary Doody, of New York, said she gave him $5,000 in securities to sell for her last April and never had received the money for them.

Watkins Yields, 'Mixed' Baby Case Ends

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—A happy ending was written today to the Watkins-Bamberger baby mixup.

Appearing in Superior Court, the parents decided that the trade of infants made last week was satisfactory to all concerned. The trade was in accordance with the findings of a scientific jury headed by Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel.

A writ of habeas corpus filed by Mrs. Margaret Watkins threw the case into court. Expecting a long fight, Superior Judge Joseph Sabath had postponed his vacation.

Papa Watkins told the court:

"I'm satisfied. I wouldn't sell my baby for $5,000,000."

FORD RESIGNS AS JUDGE

Judge Thomas J. Ford, of Common Pleas Court, today sent his resignation to Gov. John S. Fisher, in a letter in which he asked that he be relieved of his duties August 31.

He gave his present physical condition as reason for retiring.

Judge Ford retires from the bench on half pay which he is to receive until he dies. A meeting of the Allegheny County Bar Association will be held today to determine whether the organization will decide on a referendum vote to send names to Gov. Fisher of candidates to succeed Judge Ford and Judge Thomas D. Carnahan, who retired some time ago because of ill health.

Judge Ford said:

"I am sorry I am leaving the bench. It has been just as hard for me to retire as it was for me to get the job."

It was explained at Judge Ford's office that although he is retiring, he is subject to recall when the court needs him.

AMERICAN HELD IN PERU REVOLT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The American embassy at Lima, Peru advised the State Department today that Capt. Grow, of the American naval mission to Peru, has been captured by revolutionists at Camana.

He is Lieut. Com. Harold B. Grow, of the Naval Reserve, and holds the title of captain in the Peruvian navy.

The reports said that Capt. Grow flew from Lima and landed at Camana to refuel, intending to fly over Arequipa later in order to drop proclamation issued by President Leguia, who has since resigned.

The embassy is seeking assurance of his safety, communicating through informal channels with the revolutionists.

Inquiries are also being made by the embassy regarding the seizure at Arequipa by the insurgents of an airplane of the Faucett Aviation Company.

President Leguia, the message said, has resigned, leaving a military committee headed by Gen. Ochsen, formerly chief of staff, in control of the government. The leaader of the insurgents, Col. Sanchez Cerro, the telegram said, apparently was being asked to join the committee.

Boop-a-Doop Girl Says That $50,000 Was Hers

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The boop-a-doop business is apparently experiencing no depression.

Helen Kane, baby-talk songstress of musical comedy and the screen, testified today that she bought $90,000 worth of Liberty bonds last Monday and placed them in a save deposit box in Chicago under the name of Mary Marks.

She was asked:

"Why didn't you use your own name?"

She replied:

"I'm afraid of the people in Chicago. They're so tough out there. And I didn't want anyone to know I had that much money."

Miss Kane was a witness at the bankruptcy hearing of a dress firm operated by Murray Posner and Jack Eisen. She was called as a result of the discovery that Posner recently gave her $50,000 of the firm's money.

She said she originally gave Posner the money to buy bonds for her, but that he put it into his business. On August 13, she said, he called on her in Chicago, telling her he was in "terrible trouble," and saying he had just deposited $40,000 to her account in the Plaza Trust Company. He had a few days previously sent her $10,000.

YOUTH SLAIN IN BATTLE WITH BANDITS AT PARTY HOLDUP

PISTOL FIGHT WITH FIVE FATAL

Princeton Student Taunts Assailants, Holds Them Off Until Police Arrive

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A gay party of young folks from many of Cleveland's prominent families ended early today in a mêlée with holdup men and the fatal shooting of a guest.

Miller Wilkinson, 23, led a group of youths in repulsing five robbers armed with rifles and pistols, and was shot in the head after police had arrived and engaged in a gun duel with the intruders.

The party was given at the home of Ray C. Dunham, one of the city's best known realtors for friends of his son, Dunham. About 40 persons were present.

The elder Dunham said he was in the kitchen when the men fired in shooting.

"Get the police five men are trying to rob us."

Dunham ran out to the garage but was unable to get his car because of the profusion of gunmen machines. He then ran to the front of the house where he saw the young men backing the bandits off the porch. Wilkinson was taunting the robbers, Dunham said, by repeating:

"You guys are afraid to shoot. Why don't you start something?"

One man raised a rifle as if to fire it. Wilkinson grappled with him. At the same time, the other guests seized the remaining gunmen and a free-for-all fight started.

POLICE CALLED

A neighbor had called the police and three patrolmen arrived while the scuffle was in progress. The police opened fire and as the robbers fired back, Wilkinson was fatally wounded. Picked up in the street, he died a short time later.

Two of the robbers were shot in the legs and taken to a hospital. A third was picked up afterward. The wounded men gave their names as Angelo Bell, 20, and Mike Bell, 16, brothers. Angelo carried a 32-caliber pistol. Mike a 47.50 rifle police said.

Guests of the party given in honor of an engagement at first thought the holdup men were practical jokers appearing to add a thrill to the evening. Wilkinson was manager of the Princeton hockey team, his friends said.

JUDGE FORD QUITS POST

and his failing health he cannot give the required time to the duties of his office.

He will hold himself in readiness to advise his successor and his colleagues when the occasion arises.

Judge Ford was appointed to the bench of Common Pleas Court in November, 1906, by Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker. He was elected to a regular term of 10 years in 1907, re-elected in 1917 and again in 1927.

NOT COLLEGE MAN

Judge Ford is the only judge in Allegheny County who never graduated from a university or law school. When asked, some time ago, how he ever came to get into the legal profession, he replied:

"Why, I just got hold of every law book that would teach me anything. Then M. A. Woodward (a well-known lawyer of his time) took me in hand and taught me law."

Judge Ford got his start as a ticket seller at the Federal street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was a great reader and most of his knowledge was gained from books he read.

Judge Ford was chairman of the Allegheny County Republican committee from 1902 until the time he took his place on the bench.

FISHER FAVORS VOTE

A referendum taken among the local attorneys would be welcomed by Gov. Fisher as an aid in appointing new judges, the Governor has announced. The appointments were expected to be made within a few weeks. Attorney John G. Buchanan, chairman of the association's executive committee, wrote to Gov. Fisher regarding such an election and the answer was received by Attorney Arthur M. Sully, president of the bar association.

Miss Sara M. Soffel, recently appointed by Gov. Fisher to be a County Court judge, will take the oath of office Wednesday morning, she announced yesterday. Miss Soffel arrived home Saturday from New England where she has been on a vacation. Miss Soffel succeeds Judge Sylvester J. Snee who was elevated to the Court of Common Pleas recently.

FOG HOLDING UP GERMAN FLIERS

LEAST ADVERTISED YET

His flight was the most mysterious and least advertised yet. Von Gronau, assisted by Edward Zimmer, pilot; F. Albracht, wireless operator, and Franz Hack, mechanic, left the flying school for pilots at Warnemuende, of which he is head, August 18, ostensibly on a training hop. Frau Von Gronau admitted knowing nothing of his trans-Atlantic intentions, as did the aviation school's officials and the German air ministry.

The plane, which once carried Roald Amundsen on a polar expedition, arrived in the Faroes without incident, flew to Reykjavik, Iceland, Wednesday, and despite counter rumors, it was intimated that the machine soon would head back to Germany.

SECRETLY ORDERED FUEL

It was learned, however, that Von Gronau had secretly ordered fuel supplies stored for him in Greenland, and, true to prophecies, he landed at Ivigtut and next was winging toward Labrador. The plane averaged about 85 miles an hour, landing at Queensport without a mishap.

The flying boat kept in touch with the world by radio, briefly reporting its position along the way. Von Gronau said on landing that the trip had been accomplished without incident, except that storms and fog at times made progress difficult. He added that the flight was incidental to the training program of the German aviation school.

Gladys O'Donnell Holds Derby Lead

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Cal., today led the quintet of women derbyists on the Long Beach to Chicago race into Milwaukee, next to the last control point. She made the hop from Madison, Wis., in 31 minutes, 26 seconds.

Only the 85-mile trip to Chicago this afternoon stood between her and first prize money.

Weather Conditions.

The coast storm moved northward during Saturday and Sunday and is now out of the field of our observation, having caused showers, heavy in places, but mostly light, in the Upper Ohio Valley, New England and the Middle Atlantic states. Light showers also have continued in the Southern plains and a few scattered portions of the Rocky Mountains and the Plateau region, but mostly fair weather prevails today over the Northern plains, the Central Valleys, and the eastern states, due to relatively high pressure overlying those districts.

Temperatures have risen slightly over most of the country during the past 24 hours, although it is somewhat cooler in the southern plains.

River Conditions.

Weather will continue mostly fair over the entire route, with ceilings unlimited and visibilities increasing due to the burning off of the fog to higher wind velocities in the next few hours. Winds will continue mostly westerly and will increase somewhat.

'MA' SEES PLOT BY TEMPLE TO OUST AIMEE

Evangelist's Mother, Still In Sanitarium, Declares She'll Keep on Fighting

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—Although still confined to her bed in a Brentwood sanitarium, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, noted evangelist, was robust enough to hurl sizzling phrases in the direction of Angelus Temple officers, who, she says are trying to discredit her daughter and gain control of the Temple.

Meanwhile her daughter is also confined to her bed at her Malibu Beach cottage, where she is reported recovering from a threatened nervous breakdown. She is closely guarded by officers of the temple and has issued no statements since admonishing her mother "to go and talk no more."

'MA' INTERESTED

That Mrs. Kennedy was still greatly interested in her daughter and her affairs was evident when she said:

"I will hold the Temple board to strict accountability if anything happens to my daughter, either physically, mentally or financially."

The battle between Mrs. Kennedy, and her daughter, which was said to have revolved around certain of the evangelist's advisors, came to a head last week.

As the aftermath, Mrs. Kennedy charged that her nose was broken during a fistic encounter with her daughter. The evangelist's adherents said Mrs. Kennedy was recovering from a face-lifting operation. Mrs. Kennedy said her daughter was recovering from a similar operation. This was likewise denied.

SHE SEES PLOT

Mrs. Kennedy appeared to be irked more than a little by the reports issued concerning her daughter's condition. At various times she had been reported near death. These reports, and others which said the evangelist had sought to have an operation to remove excess fat from her legs, were all a part of a plot to discredit Mrs. McPherson, according to her mother, Says Mrs. Kennedy:

"For more than three years they have been plotting to get the Temple away from Aimee. They forced me out, and now they are trying to force her out."

GIRL'S CHARGES COST MAN $50

Harry De Angelis, 24, of 1331 Locust street, was ordered by Magistrate J. J. Sweeney, in the South Side Police Court today, to pay $50 or serve 30 days in jail, when Margaret Yansura, 16, of 717 Sarah street, appeared against him charging he had thrown her from his moving machine at Ninth and Sarah streets, August 8.

At the hearing Miss Yansura testified De Angelis, appearing at her home, persuaded her to ride with him. During the drive he attacked her and threw her from the moving machine, she said.

She was taken to the South Side Hospital by a passing motorist where it was found she had sustained severe bruises and lacerations of the body.

Indians Wreathed By Snakes Dance For Rain

HOTEVILLA, Hopi Indian Reservation, Ariz., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Hopi Braves, following the ritual which guided their desert ancestors through the ages, performed their weird snake dance yesterday as the sun dropped over the edge of the mesa.

Scores of Braves with rattlesnakes dangling down their naked, glistening bodies, went through the rites, a supplication to the Rain God, while an ancient medicine man scanned the northern skies.

No participant in the dance was bitten by the snakes. After the ceremony the Indians began a feast of 24 hours.

eral years ago, Clyde strove for efficiency in the organization until failing health, according to the board's announcement, forced his resignation.

Hughes, native Pennsylvanian, has been connected with the Carnegie Steel Company and its affiliated interests for more than 25 years. He was born in Mercer, Pa., January 25, 1878. His first job was with the Edgar Thomson steel works engineering department in 1897.

Successively he was promoted to engineering operations at Donora, Pa., Youngstown, O., Johnstown, Pa., and Ojibway, Canada. In 1918 he was transferred here to be general superintendent of operations being carried out at Neville Island by the government in the construction of a proposed ordnance plant.

Heavy Cable Drum Rolls Down Hill, Hits House

A telephone cable drum, weighing about 200 pounds, caused serious damage to the home of A. J. Hosec, of 1255 Voskamp street, when it crashed against the building after rolling down an embankment. Boys playing at the Troy Hill playground are believed to have started the drum on its 400-foot plunge over the hillside.

Hosec, standing in the yard of his home, narrowly escaped serious injury when the reel hurtled over his head. The drum struck a concrete wall and hit the side of the house 10 feet from the ground. Other members of the family in the house were shaken by the crash. The house was damaged $300, Hosec told police.

EATON TELLS OF REPUBLIC MERGER

How Financier Got Control Revealed at Hearing in Bethlehem Combine Quiz

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The procedure by which Cyrus S. Eaton obtained control of the old Republic Iron and Steel Company, which was later the hub of the Republic Steel consolidation, was revealed today during cross examination of the Cleveland financier in the suit brought by one of his companies to enjoin the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem merger.

Newton D. Baker, of defense counsel, took up the cross examination where he left off Friday when he told the court that he expected to prove Eaton opposed the Bethlehem deal because he had "other plans" for Sheet and Tube.

FIRM ORGANIZED

Eaton testified that between the time he became interested in Trumbull steel and the time that company was taken into Republic steel, Continental Shares, Inc., a $150,000,000 investment concern, was organized and that one of its purposes was to promote the consolidation between Trumbull and Republic. This organization took place in 1926, he said.

Eaton also testified that a syndicate was formed to buy Republic stock and that its members included John T. Harrington, the president of Trumbull; W. H. Foster and Phil Wick, members of the executive committee of that company.

The Trumbull company likewise invested $775,000 from its own treasury in shares of Republic and Inland Steel of Chicago, he said.

QUIZ ON BROKERS

Baker wanted to know if it was not a fact that Otis & Company, of which Eaton is a partner and which aided in the organization of Continental Shares, represented Trumbull as brokers in acquiring Republic and Inland Stock.

Eaton said his memory had become hazy as to details of the transaction and when Baker read from a deposition taken in another case to the effect that $775,000 was transferred from Trumbull to Otis & Company for investment purposes he agreed that the statemen probably was correct.

This general plan, the witness testified, originated with President Harrington, of Trumbull.

Pressing for a definite answer to whether Otis & Company handled the brokerage trahsaction, Baker asked Eaton for his recollection of the deal as chairman of Trumbull and member of that firm's executive committee. Eaton replied that he wanted it made clear he was in no way the executive head of Trumbull.

Baker asked Eaton if he concurred in Harrington's view with regard to Republic and Inland. Eaton said he did.

The advertisement ruled that only concerns which had operated in night flying over a 250-miler oute for a period of six months were elegible to compete.

The local company however, was expected to fight the case through Supreme Court in the event it should be refused the award. It does not qualify under the night flying ruling.

IN THE EARLY eighties, when Col. Coates, running through his Kansas City hotel, "The Coates House," warned all his guests to take to the cyclone cellar, the beautiful and brave Miss Cora Baker, of St. Louis, observed that the yellow cyclone funnel had climbed the steep river bank above the hotel. She chartered a two-horse hack, with a young man from the East, and drove after the cyclone, observing its effects, cutting houses in two, lifting up sidewalks, etc. It did not come back and paid no attention to her, which is more than you could say of any man in Kansas City or St. Louis.

PILGRIMS BACK FROM FRANCE

Their pilgrimages of love to the graves of hero sons in France at an end, Pittsburgh's first contingent of Gold Star mothers was home today following arrival in New York from Cherbourg Saturday.

The return voyage was made on the SS. George Washington, the liner which the late President Woodrow Wilson used on his peace conference trip in 1919.

Among those who arrived home Saturday were Mrs. Olive M. Horne, of 125 Charles street, Knoxville, past president of the Service Star Legion of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Michael Doyle, of Crafton; Mrs. Theresa Fournier, of 30 Johns street, McKees Rocks; Mrs. Laura B. Keith, of 1400 State avenue, Coraopolis, a Gold Star widow, and Mrs. Agnes Moran, of 1811 Fairlee street, North Side.

OTHERS ALSO EN ROUTE

Completing Tour N, the second group of mothers, who sailed from Hoboken July 26, is now on the high seas en route home. Their ship is scheduled to dock some time this week, the United States Lines report.

Approximately 40 Pittsburgh and Allegheny County women are in this party. On the ship also is the body of Mrs. Harriet Bates, of Portage, near Johnstown, who died shortly after her arrival in France.

A War Department aide is accompanying the body and will offer condolences to her family.

A third group of mothers, which left for France early this month, is expected home within the next two weeks.

PRAISE FOR EVERYTHING

The tours, made under auspices of the War Department, were supervised by picked army officers and nurses.

The mothers have nothing but praise for the way they were treated.

Mrs. Horne said:

"The trip to France and my son's grave was probably the climax of my life. The courtesies shown us both by our own and the French governments have created a bond of sympathy that will exist in my heart for all time. I am sure every mother feels the same way as I do."

The participants were in good spirits at all times and no serious mishap marred the pilgrimage for the local women. All the mothers were reported in the best of health by Maj. A. J. shcraft, Army medical officer. Mrs. Anna Schmitt, of 4912 Scioto street, now en route home, was the only woman requiring medical attention. She suffered an infected finger and was given treatment in the American Hospital, Paris.

Fear 'Red Tape' May Keep Andree's Vivid Story From Eager World

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—The interest and curiosity of a thrill-sated world was focused today on a few brittling sheafs of note paper that formed the diary of ill-starred Salomon Auguste Andree and his two companions, courageous martyrs of exploration, who perished in 1897 after making a gallant attempt to cross the top of the world in a balloon.

As the sealing vessel Brattvaag carrying the bodies of the Polar trio, as well as Dr. Gunnar Horn and his party of explorers, who made the discovery, fought its way through fast-freezing seas in the hope of reaching Norway before the end of the month, a waiting world speculated on the future ownership of the all-important diary.

STORY MAY BE LOCKED UP

Dr. Horn, it was believed, has contemplated delivering to the Swedish government the little record of momentous events and adventure in the far North as painfully inscribed by Andree before death ended his sufferings.

In that event there is the dismal probability that the fascinating account may be locked away in the mysterious and secret files alongside other government documents, depriving an avidly interested generation of perhaps the richest story of adventurous life and death in the grim icefields.

An inkling of the luscious store of what the little diary has to offer already has been gleaned from a single sentence deciphered from one of the pages:

"Eighteenth July, 1897, 83 degrees North 32 degrees East."

ADVENTURE—AND DEATH

The position noted on the page would have placed the death party at about 117 nautical miles due west of the camp where they eventually perished, their bodies and equipment to be preserved nearly intact for 33 long years.

Apparently, within a week after soaring aloft from Danes Island in Spitzbergen, in an oval-shaped swinging gasbag, Andree and his companions landed safely on the icefields and began a 117-mile trek, dragging their huge supply of food and camping equipment after them on sleds.

From deductions of the spot on White Island where Dr. Horn found the bodies, it was assumed the North Pole aspirants finally met a body of open water too formidable to be braved in their collapsible boat and realized suddenly that theirs was a question of rescue by friends or death in the Far North. They established their camp, ate Polar bear meat, and one by one succumbed to cold and starvation. Andree, it appeared, was last to die.

SWEDEN PAYS TRIBUTE

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 25.—(Universal)—Relatives of Salomon Auguste Andree have joined the Swedish nation in paying honor to the pioneer aerial Polar explorer, the mystery of whose tragic fate has just been solved after 33 years.

Sunday services in Sweden's churches in many cases were made memorials to the Swedish explorer. Pictures of the man whose death with two companions on Kvistseya Island, Franz Josef Land, in the winter of 1897, remained a mystery until several days ago, were hung in the homes of his sister-in-law and niece, and draped with flowers.

'MA' FERGUSON BADLY BEATEN

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Nomination of Ross B. Sterling, of Houston, for governor in Saturdays Democratic run-off primary, indicated by unofficial returns, was hailed by many Texas newspapers today as meaning political oblivion for his opponent, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson.

The greatest number of voters ever to cast ballots in a Texas election denied Mrs. Ferguson the opportunity of again being governor. Sterling's margin of victory was approximately 95,000 votes. The latest tabulation was: Sterling, 465,769; Ferguson, 372,492.

Mrs. Ferguson and her husband, James E., have been figures in Texas politics for 16 years. After serving as governor from 1914 to 1917 he was ousted, and failed for the nomination in 1918. Mrs. Ferguson became governor in 1924. She was defeated for renomination by Gov. Dan Moody in 1926. Ferguson's impeachment was ruled as barring him from the present race.

Sterling will be opposed in the November election by Dr. George C. Butte, of Austin, nominated by the Republicans in the first primary a month ago.

ALDINE ROBBERY QUIZ HOLDS 3

Three suspects, arrested in connection with the holdup of the Aldine Theater Saturday night, were ordered held without bail today at a hearing in Central Police Court before Magistrate J. J. O'Connor.

They are James Pugh, 21, of 10 Overhill street; Solomon Weiss, 21, of 805 Clarissa street, and Leo Goldberg, 21, of 10 Overhill street.

Jack Rosenberg, 24, of 1422 Colwell street; Morris Schreiber, 34, of Beechwood boulevard, and Abe Flesch, of 1417 Fifth avenue, were discharged when detectives said they had no part in the holdup.

The six were arrested in Peacock Inn, Babcock boulevard, Saturday night after the holdup.

Two boys, Jack and Albert staub, of Evergreen road, who were sitting on a bridge rail Saturday night, identified Pugh and partially identified Weiss and Goldberg as the three men who left a stolen Packard car in Babcock boulevard, near the inn, according to police.

Sam Sirkan, driving for Andrew Grivas, who was forced by three men from the car, and Jack Hughes, treasurer of the Aldine theater, from whom $1,500 was taken in the office of the theater Saturday night, will be called in an attempt to identify the trio.

LEAGUE SCORES BRITAIN

GENEVA, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The mandates commission of the League of Nations today condemned the "inaction or partial inactions of the British government in the face of the dangerous situation in Palestine a year ago, in a report on the Jewish-Arab disturbances published today.

The mandate commission, composed of the strongest powers of the League, accused the British government of having failed in its administration of the Palestine mandate specifically in failing to satisfy the political aspirations of the Arabs, in failing to procure security for persons and property for establishment of the Jewish home and for being taken by surprise by the outbreak of last August.

Secretary Henderson, replying tersely for his government, declared the commission itself did not foresee the August trouble and that the commission in many instances has rejected the findings of the Shaw commission and accepted the declarations presented by Jewish agencies upon which the government had no chance to comment.

Mr. Henderson pointed out the difficulty of satisfying the political ambitions of the Arabs and at the same time advancing the cause of a Jewish national home, while carrying out orders of the League of Nations to maintain the rights of all inhabitants of Palestine regardless of race and religion.

The League council, to which the report will be presented, will begin its session on September 8, but the report will not be considered until near the close of the meeting, probably about October 1, after the end of the league assembly session.

She had an elapsed time lead of more than five hours over second-place Mildred Morgan, Beverly Hills, Cal., at the last-leg takeoff from Madison, Wis., this morning.

OFF FROM ST. PAUL

The Seattle to Chicago air racers left St. Paul, Minn., at 9:06 a. m., on the last leg of their flight after spending the night there. (Nick) Mamer, of Spokane, Frank Kammer, of Wenatchee, Wash., and Floyd Keadle, of Portland, Ore.

The finish of both derbies was on the mid-afternoon program.

The takeoff on the non-stop speed classic from Los Angeles has been tentatively set for tomorrow, dependent upon the weather man.

The four speed aces in the classic are Lt. Col. Roscoe Turner, veteran trans-continental flier; Capt. William S. Brook, New York-to-Tokio pilot; L. F. Schoenhair and Wiley Post.

Post, contest officials disclosed, expects to carry two barographs, leaving one and refueling at the finish here and taking off again for New York in an attempt to break Capt. Frank Hawks' West-East record.

LOTTERY TAKES SECOND LIFE

The second violent death ascribed to the lottery racket occurred this morning when Allan Epps, 24, Negro, of 608 Henderson street, a "numbers" writer, who was stabbed in the back during a fight in the kitchen of the Presbyterian Hospital Friday, died there this morning.

Columbus Tucker, 40, a Negro, of 1809 Cliff street, an employe of the hospital, who, police say, weilded a butcher knife in a battle with Epps that raged over nine cents in booking "numbers," was turned over to the coroner.

Police say Epps attacked his customer with a fruit knife, and that in retaliation Tucker stabbed the man with the butcher knife.

The death of Epps recalls the case of Antonio Bancale, retired merchant tailor, of Wilmot street, who, on July 22, shot himself to death on a bench in front of the Allegheny General Hospital when he failed to win, after playing 700 numbers. In a letter to his wife and children he told how his competence for old age had been spent in the lottery.

12 POSSES HUNT KIDNAPER, GIRL

VALPARAISO, Ind., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Hundreds of grim, determined men threshed through the Kankakee River bottoms today looking for a farm laborer and the 10-year-old girl he kidnaped, hoping to find her alive but fearing to find her dead.

The girl, Betty Jane Foster, was abducted from her farm home Saturday night by Claude Diffner, 27, who formerly worked for the girl's father, Ernest Foster.

Diffner left a note, found yesterday, in which he said he was in love with the child, but would kill her if police were notified, he told them.

Neighbors, friends and police of six counties joined in a search, which was divided into 12 posses. No word of the two had been received until last night, when a report was received that an automobile containing a man and a girl had been seen on a little-used road in the river bottoms and that the man had tried to avoid being seen.

Doctors Who Saved Man, Let Woman Die, Upheld

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—How physicians at the Children's Hospital debated and finally made a choice of who should live—a man or a woman, both of whom were suffering from infantile paralysis—was revealed here today.

Irving S. Johnston, 25, an artist and art director for a San Francisco publishing house, is alive and recovering today, while May McColloch, 30, daughter of a retired contractor, is dead.

Doctors admitted that had there been two Drinker respirators at the hospital perhaps the lives of both patients might have been saved.

It was decided that Johnston would have his chance for life. The fact that he had already been using the respirator for a week before a crisis was reached in the woman's case was the deciding factor, it was said.

From opinions expressed by prominent persons, both physicans and laymen, the action of the doctors in making their choice was upheld.

The Rev. Newton E. Moats, pastor of Grace Church, Methodist, said:

"The man had a good chance to live. The woman's chance was doubtful. The doctors chose rightly; it would have been foolish to risk two lives where there was a chance of saving one."

Said Dr. Frieda O. Krause:

"I would have disregarded the sex of the two patients, just as they did. The severity of the illness, the man's chance of recovery compared to that of the woman—these were the only things to be considered."

Dr. Louis B. Deal declared:

"It was up to the physicians to save the life they were practically sure of. The matter of sex should not have been considered."

Dr. Russell C. Ryan asserted:

"I can only judge the question theoretically, but it seems to me the doctors at the hospital made the only decision possible. Why take a chance of sacrificing two lives?"

Laborites Wax Sarcastic Over Lot of York Baby

GLAMIS, Scotland, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Attention paid the baby of the Duchess of York has excited sarcastic comment by left wing Laborites. Comparisons are made between the lot of royal infants and that of poverty-stricken subjects.

At the annual Keir Hardie memorial demonstration Saturday at Cumnock, Ayrshire, about 100 miles from here, Miss Mary Shennon, Laborite, said that the royal baby "would never have to face the question of living on 5, 3 or 2 shillings a week."

John McGovern, new labor M. P. from Shettleston, said:

"It was a "mockery and a shame to see the Labor home secretary sitting for three weeks on the doorstep of royalty as a kind of labor mid-wife, while the working classes were enduring the long night of martyrdom and despair."

Departure of the Duke of York for Balmoral to visit the King and Queen is taken here as the best indication yet of the good progress being made by the duchess and the newborn princess.

After bidding goodbye to the duchess and his two daughters, the duke yesterday slipped out quietly from Glamis Castle driving his own car. He plans to return Friday or Saturday.

BOYS NEED GANG SPIRIT, SCHOOL HEADS TOLD

Educator Tells Teachers in County Meet Influence, Good or Bad, Valuable

Even a fair gang is better than no gang experience for the boys of 12 to 18 years, Dr. Paul F. V[illegible], president of Battle Creek College, Battle Creek, Mich., stressed today before the [illegible] teachers attending the opening session of the Allegheny County Teachers Institute in Memorial Hall.

"While the home environment may be good lack of proper elements including too much attention from a mother or father at certain ages in the boy or girl can do the wrong. A girl needs her mother until the age of six. Her father's attention is necessary from six to 10 years, when the gang spirit should prevail. The father's attention again is necessary from 15 to 18 years to develop understanding in the finer merits of the male.

"In the boy a mother's guidance should predominate until he reach 8 years, when the father's influence should take hold until he is 12 years. The gang urge will then hold him until 16 when a little mothering again becomes needed.

"A boy or girl during these years has needed adventure in something new to see a thrill to create excitement or in short new situations to challenge him or her. Even a fist fight or two for the boy is a necessity. Too the girl must be exposed to an environment that will necessitate them doing a good turn each day because the human nature is essentially selfish.

JILTED, GUNMAN KILLS 2; SLAIN

EMO, Ont., Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Jilted by his sweetheart, Emerick Fernette, 20, of Fort Francis, Ont., embarked on a short-lived but sensational career of crime during which he held up a crack passenger train, murdered two United States immigration inspectors and then lost his own life early today as the result of a wound suffered in a gun battle with officers.

In a death-bed confession model youth said his brief but bloody fling at crime followed a misunderstanding with his sweetheart, whom he did not name.

Young Fernette was fatally wounded by provincial police after he had sought refuge in a farm house and withstood an hour's siege.

Near Emo he held up the train. A shot wakened Lawrence E. Dalton, of Ranier, Minn., and Lawrence E. Jones of Warroad, Minn., both United States immigration inspectors.

The two American officers started toward the smoking compartment. Fernette met them in the narrow aisle and in a brief gun battle shot and killed both men.

As the train slowed down he leaped into the darkness. A few hours later he appeared at a lonely farm house. He awakened the occupants and forced them to leave.

The house was soon surrounded by police and in the ensuing gun-battle he was fatally wounded.

TOKIO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Harold Bromley, Pacific Coast flier now awaiting favorable weather here for a dash across the Pacific to Tacoma, Wash., announced today that unless climatic conditions improved shortly he would postpone his takeoff until after Tuesday.

Following a successful flight this afternoon Bromley said he desired at least 24 hours of good weather prior to his departure for the United States.

'ATTIC' CASE JURY LOCKED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—After two days of deliberation the jury before which Mrs. Waldtraut Oesterreich was tried on a charge of murdering her husband, Fred C. Oesterreich, wealthy Milwaukee garment manufacturer, sent word to Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy late yesterday it was "hopelessly deadlocked."

Judge Hardy instructed bailiffs to take the six women and six men from the jury room to the hotel in which they have been locked each night since the trial began three weeks ago. He told the jurors to rest and resume deliberation at 9 a. m. today.

Mrs. Oesterreich was indicted last April with Otto Sanhuber for the murder, which occurred August 22, 1922, but obtained a separate trial. Sanhuber confessed secret tenant of the Oesterreich attics here and in Milwaukee for more than a decade, was convicted of manslaughter and freed by the statute of limitations. He said he lived in hiding so he could be near Mrs. Oesterreich whom he loved.

CAPONE SUBURB KILLING SCENE

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Shot in the back of the head and badly beaten, the body of Joseph Ferraccio, 44, was found today in front of his home in Cicero, suburban stronghold of the Capone forces.

Although the dead man was known as a butcher, police believe he was involved in a liquor racket and was slain by gangsters who took him for a "ride" and then returned to hurl the body in the street at his home.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Why one of the most formidable criminal armaments ever discovered was assembled in New York was a problem puzzling police today. The underworld equipment was found under a bed in a house near the Brooklyn waterfront.

That Alphonse Capone, noted gang leader, planned a fight for control of New York's liquor trade was the theory of police as to the assembling of the armament here.

Italian King Shares In Army Maneuvers

FAENZA, Italy, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Victor Emmanuel, Italy's soldier-king, today took an active part in the extensive Army maneuvers around Val Lamone in the Apennines.

With Minister of War Gazzera and his general staff, the King, known as a keen tactician, was closely watching the operations of the Red and Blue armies waging mimic battle in the picturesque hills.

The locality was selected because Italy's last war was fought mostly among the mountains. Observers believe the next probably will be waged under like conditions.

Fugitive Bank Man Held as Absconder

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Joseph T. Petroski, 32, missing since February, 1929, from Detroit where he was manager of the Michigan State Bank, was captured here today.

He is said to have absconded with $14,000 and $5,000 worth of bonds in his possession was found, according to the police, $600 worth of bonds.

DOWNTOWN GEM STORE HELD UP

While one man stood as a lookout outside, two armed bandits entered the Cuda jewelry store, 430 Market street, at 8:30 a. m. today, held up the proprietor and his assistant and escaped with rings worth $2,000 and $300 in cash.

H. W. Montgomery, manager of the establishment, was ordered to put up his hands just as he was removing two trays of rings and the cash from the office safe. One of the bandits covered him with a revolver, while the second went to the upper floor.

There, A. Mallen, of 905 Federal street, was ordered to keep quiet while the job was completed. Montgomery reported to city detectives and police.

After the bandit on the lower floor had finished his work of pocketing the loot, he called his companion and both backed out of the store.

Montgomery told police they were lost with the lookout among the crowd of passersby before he had opportunity to raise an alarm.

G. O. P. STARTS STATE DRIVE

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 25 (AP).—With preliminaries over, Republican state leaders today start their first full week of a campaign on behalf of the Republican ticket, headed by Gifford Pinchot for governor and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for United States Senator, for the November general election.

State Treasurer Edward Martin, chairman of the Republican state committee, has received reports from his assistant, A. Boyd Hamilton, regarding sentiment for the ticket in Western Pennsylvania counties, as reflected in discussions by leaders incident to the celebration in honor of Secretary Davis, on Saturday, at Sharon, his home town.

Mr. Hamilton is expected to come to the state committee headquarters in this city today or tomorrow.

Arrangements are being completed for Mr. Pinchot and other members of the Republican state ticket to appear together under formal sanction of the state committee next Thursday at Williams Grove, Cumberland county, for the first time since the primary last May.

Pinchot had been invited individually by W. Searight Stuart, Republican leader of Cumberland, to attend the "political day" of the Grangers' annual picnic in the Grove. Immediately after the supreme court last week upheld the former governor's Nomination in its decision in the Luzerne county ballot dispute, Martin also sent requests to all the nominees to be present.

La Guardia Supports Butler Anti-Dry Plea

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(INS)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, today was assured of the support of Congressman F. H. La Guardia in his demand that the Republican state convention go on record for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. In a letter to Dr. Butler, La Guardia said he would take that stand and if his view was not supported by Republicans in his district, he would run for re-election as an independent.

Egyptian Premier's Assassination Foiled

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 25.—(AP)—What was believed by authorities to be an attempt to assassinate the Egyptian premier, Sidky Pasha, was frustrated today. A Berberine dressed as a waiter, and armed with a very sharp ax, was discovered in the corridor of a train outside the compartment in which the Premier was traveling from Alexander to Cairo and was arrested.

PREPARE DO-X FOR N. Y. HOP

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Universal Service.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Aug. 25.—The trans-Atlantic flight of the 12-engined Dornier DO-X from Lisbon to New York, has been definitely decided upon, although the official announcement may not be made until the end of the week or the beginning of next week.

With the caution and reserve that characterizes Dr. Claude Dornier, he is awaiting this week's long trial flights and their scientific results before he will commit himself.

Meanwhile, preparations are being pushed here and at the expected landing places in the Azores and the Bermudas. These include plans for a landing in mid-ocean for refueling, if necessary, or even to demonstrate the practicability of such landings for the giant aircraft like the DO-X.

Orders have been cabled to charter a ship with radio direction-giving instruments and about a 10-ton gasoline tankage capacity. The vessel will be stationed about 600 miles east and north of the Bermudas. It will have hawsers for towing and rubber tubes for pumping gasoline into the DO-X tanks. This would be the first re-fueling of an aircraft on the ocean.

Arrival of a new Curtiss Conqueror motor and 13 oil coolers, is believed to have set a freight record from America. Motor and coolers were flown from Buffalo to New York and placed aboard the Europa an hour before sailing. Expressed here from Bremen, the time from Buffalo to Friedrichshafen was only seven days.

AMERICAN DRUG MEET NEARER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(Universal)—A movement for a pan-American narcotics conference to devise means to limit narcotics manufactures to the world's medical needs has now taken definite form, it was learned today.

With diplomatic representatives of various Latin-American countries here expressing approval of the project, it will be taken up in earnest when public health officials of all Central and South American states gather in conference at the Pan-American Union here in the near future.

With a crystallized sentiment developing in favor of concerted action among the Americas to stamp out the dope evil, it is considered certain that the American State Department will take the initiative by calling an Inter-American conference.

NATION WIDE HIGHWAY PLAN WINS FAVOR

Increase in Auto Touring Cited as Added Reason For Great Scenic Route

By ARTHUR HACHTEN,
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. Automobilists' associations, nature groups and government officials today continued to join in indorsing proposals for a Washington-to-Los Angeles highway, connecting national parks and other scenic wonders en route.

The idea of a great transcontinental artery providing a tour of matchless interest and variety was first proclaimed by the Hearst newspapers and was enthusiastically received by numerous members of Congress.

Department of Interior officials in charge of the nation's parks, today pointed to the tremendous increase in auto touring by persons bent upon seeing America first as added reason for perfecting a through route.

WOULD STRENGTHEN LINKS

For the most part existing highways would serve as links in the national parks highway, but the object is to strengthen weak links. A highway from the national capital to Los Angeles, stretching across a southern tier of states, would be open during all seasons of the year.

Westward bound, the highway first would take the tourist through the beautiful Shenandoah Valley in Virginia, then to Smoky Mountain National Park, a recent addition to the national parks chain, in Eastern Tennessee.

On to Mammoth Cave in Kentucky and to the Ozark and Ouachita Mountains in Arkansas. Hot Springs National Park in Arkansas would be the next link.

ROUTE THROUGH WEST

The trek then would lead to the Wichita Mountains in Oklahoma, with the spectacular Palo Duro canyon in the Panhandle district of Texas next greeting the tourist. After crossing New Mexico, the highway would lead to the Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona and thence to Los Angeles.

Alternative routes from Palo Duro canyon by way of Carlsbad Caves, Phoenix, Ariz., and San Diego also are proposed.

The parks along the projected highway receive hundreds of thousands of tourists each year. Creation of the scenic highway would result in doubling the number of visitors in a comparatively short time, officials predict.

1 HELD, 2 SOUGHT IN GUN BATTLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP)—A running gun battle through the streets of Washington was staged last night between occupants of a speeding automobile and officers from the city and adjoining Maryland counties. At its conclusion one man was arrested.

Sweeping past a red traffic light in Bladensburg, Md., the machine was boarded by a constable who attempted to stop it. He was knocked off, however, and another officer took up the chase, shooting. He was wounded in the wrist by a bullet from the fleeing machine. Motorised Washington police took up the chase, and still exchanging shots, followed the speeders back into Maryland territory where the car was found abandoned. Herbert Brooks, 25, was arrested soon after. Two other occupants of the machine were being sought today.

Pan-American Trade Conference Opens

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 25.—(AP)—More than 100 Latin-American delegates from 18 countries of Central and South America gathered in the state capitol today to open the first business session of the Pan-American reciprocal trade conference.

During the next six days they will discuss problems of tariff, quarantine, tourist travel and other details of reciprocal trade with state and federal representatives.

Wrong-Side Heart Fails, Youth Dies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Born with his heart on the wrong side, Mike Callos, 17, confounded physicians by living an active life until yesterday. The abnormal organ finally weakened, and he died. Although the boy's heart never functioned normally, he went through grammar school and continued at high school until last fall, when his condition prevented further studies.

Veteran of 102 Civil War Combats Dies

TOWANDA, Pa., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Capt. John H. Summers, Towanda's hero of the Civil War, with a record of 102 engagements as commander of Troop C, Seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, died Sunday at the age of 90.

Capt. Summers prided himself on his record of never having been wounded or captured, though having three horses shot from under him.

Gas Blast Wrecks Plant, Burns One

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A building was wrecked and a man was injured late last night in an explosion at the Southern Oxygen Company plant in South Washington, Va. J. Boyd Herndon, 26, badly burned, may lose his sight.

CLARION POWER 'COSTS' LIST $2 NECKTIES

U. S. Accountant Slashes Total, Citing Bills For Finery, 'Grand Opening'

By M. E. RAMSAY,
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—A $144 bill for three-dollar neckties, and $3,366 for a "grand opening," were charged up by the power trust as part of the cost of promoting and building a hydro-electric plant in Pennsylvania, it was disclosed today.

The Clarion River Power Company has reported the cost of this plant, which would become the basis of charges against consumers, as $11,032,000.

In a report just filed with the Federal Power Commission, William V. King, its chief accountant, put the actual cost at $4,645,000 and proposed that only this sum be "allowed" by the commission.

FROM EXCLUSIVE SHOP

Forty-eight of the $3 scarves were bought in one lot from an exclusive New York shop, according to the company's records. There was nothing to show who wore them.

The "grand opening" included an outing for several hundred persons, and was charged up along with $35 for "tips to porters," $23 for "cigars and cigarets en route" and $2,000 for "conducting and entertaining interested persons."

"In the family" fees amounting to $800,000 were refused recognition by King as representing cost of the project.

INDUCEMENTS LISTED

The controlling concern, H. D. Walbridge and Company, of New York, charted $300,000 to "induce" its utility company to guarantee the power company's bonds, and $200,000 to persuade a construction company it controlled to build the plant for its power company.

The construction company, according to the report, then subcontracted the work.

Clarion River stock was sold by Walbridge and Company at an average of about $31 a share, according to King's report, but charged in the project cost at its par value, totaling $4,453,000. This "indicates an inflation in the project cost on account of this item of approximately $3,000,000," according to the report.

ONLY FIVE MILLS

The Clarion company also credited its accounts with only five mills per kilowatt hour as received for its current, according to the report, whereas a contract showed it was to receive eight mills.

King's report was based on an extensive investigation and opinions given by Solicitor Charles A. Russell. Many records were withheld by the company, the report says.

CHINESE REBELS BLOW UP TRAIN

KWEITEH, Honan, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A Nationalist ammunition train of 19 cars was blown up near here today. The loss of life, although undetermined, was believed small.

While the cause of the blaze which set off the blast was unknown, it was rumored that rebel spies were responsible for the conflagration. Explosion of the ammunition, which consisted largely of heavy caliber shells and aerial bombs, ripped out the railroad right-of-way, twisted steel cars and hurled debris hundreds of feet.

The train was standing five miles from this town when the blaze broke out. The explosions were heard for miles.

With the Nationalist government suffering so severe a loss, it was reported that fighting along the Haichow-Tungkwan Railroad was at a low ebb, this also being a result of the unprecedented heavy rains in Northern Honan Province.

The rains have kept up for the last two weeks, resulting in floods which have covered thousands of acres of grain. Lands on both sides of the railroad are submerged, transforming battle lines into mud wallows.

CONVICTS EARN BIG SUMS

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Some of the prisoners in the Maryland Penitentiary receive as much as $140 a month for work done in the prison shops and 1,100 have bank accounts. This was revealed by Warden Patrick Braey, who said: "The working prisoner is the most contented and the best prisoner."

The prisoners' funds are subject to withdrawals by checks. Some of the money is sent outside to relatives, and some is used to purchase furniture for cells, books and even musical instruments.

Student-Wife Shot, Claims Accident

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A second blood transfusion was made in an effort to save the life of Mrs. F. M. Hereford, 23, of Charleston, who accidentally shot herself. Hospital authorities said her condition was grave.

Mrs. Hereford and her husband, both students in West Virginia University, told police the shooting was accidental, occurring while she was inspecting a revolver.

Harrisburg Fires Sweep Warehouses

HARRISBURG, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Two warehouse fires in widely separated sections burning at the same time last night kept virtually all of Harrisburg's fire-fighting forces engaged several hours.

The larger fire wrecked the warehouse and branch store of Miller's Furniture Inc., with damage estimated at $200,000. The other blaze at the warehouse of the Leroy Roofing Company also caused considerable damage.

EXCELSIOR, Minn., Aug. 25 (AP).—George H. Babcock, 29, of St. Paul, a parachute jumper, was killed at an amusement park here while attempting a five-parachute jump.

Babcock leaped from a plane 2,500 feet in the air. Two of his 'chutes opened. Two failed, while the fifth opened only a few feet above Lake Minnetonka, too late to be of any help.

Peace Pact Spurned By Textile Strikers

BESSEMER CITY, N. C., Aug. 25 (AP).—Seven hundred striking employes of the American Mills at a massmeeting voted unanimously not to return to work today in accordance with an agreement reached with mill officials Saturday. R. C. Gregory and E. L. Gillespie, strike leaders, said.

SLAYER KILLED IN GUN FIGHT

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Trapped in a tenement room after he had killed one man, wounded a police lieutenant and a Negro woman, a Negro gunman was shot at least nine times and killed.

The Negro, Smith Bray, was cornered in a tenement across the street from where he had killed another Negro in a brawl. Police were called and as they were leaving, Bray fired several shots from his hiding place.

Lieut. Rowe crashed into the room and the Negro shot him in the hip. Edward Leary, a reporter, was close behind. The Negro rush at Leary, shoved the pistol into his stomach and pulled the trigger. The gun was empty. Leary drew a revolver and shot the man.

The slain Negro was A. Roberts.

Rider 'Lights Up' At Gas Station, Bus Burns

POCOMOKE CITY, Md., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Fourteen passengers of a bus bound from New York to Cape Charles were forced to scramble into the open early yesterday as fire destroyed the vehicle. The blaze, reports said, was caused by a passenger who alighted as the bus stopped in front of a filling station and struck a match to light a cigaret. Some of the passengers were cut and bruised in climbing from the bus. All were transferred to a train.

The bus, known as "Atlantic City," was the property of the Pennsylvania Railway Transit Company. Flames from the bus ignited the filling station house.

Police were told the trouble started over a game of cards. In a bed in the house in which Bray was slain, Mrs. Bray, his estranged wife, was found suffering from bullet wounds.

KILLING MARKS TRIANGLE CASE

NORWICH, N. Y., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Herbert Hicks, 32, World War veteran, is dead, and Lewis Cole, 62-year-old farmer, and his young wife, Lorinda, are in Chenango County jail at Norwich.

Hicks' body, with a shotgun slug in the back, was found near Smyrna, a dozen miles from here, on a farm adjoining Cole's.

Cole told state troopers that he was suspicious of Mrs. Cole and Hicks. Several months ago he had them arrested but failed to press the charges. Friday night, Cole said, he and his two sons approached a barn on the next farm and saw Hicks and Mrs. Cole. Hicks ran one way and Mrs. Cole another. Cole, then, according to his story, fired one shell from his shotgun into the air, intending to frighten Hicks.

Hicks is survived by three children and his widow from whom he was separated.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That maps and time-tables to the contrary, there is no city of Washington, D. C. It was legislated out of the picture.

That Romeo loved a Rosaline before he died for a Juliet!

That the Italian Ambassador's Mrs. is the only woman in any diplomatic service who receives a salary for whoopee purposes.

That Ruth Etting avers a recent tornado in Nebraska swept the feathers from a hen in her backyard until it was naked.

That the sure cure for a bee sting is mud applications.

That for any other insect bite the best bet is to apply the paste that comes from mixing salt with soda.

That the Atlantic City Life Guards will tell you not to smear olive oil on yourself before getting sunburned because the oil helps you to fry, you chumps! Use vinegar with the whites of eggs.

That it is a Chinese law that no piece of paper with printing on it should ever be destroyed.

That Poe was sealed when he was 26 to Virginia Clemm, 13.

That in the theatrical audiences of Shakespeare's time the femmes wore masks, so that there seemed less impropriety in their listening to the coarse passages of the drayma.

That the figure on top of the Capitol dome (in Washington) only looks like an Indian. It is Miss Freedom in Grecian robe restraint.

That George Washington's tomb in the Capitol crypt is still vacant. (Say! This column ought to go big in Washington!)

That the substitute U. S. Mail lads carrying Special Delivery mail rate no salary. They get nine cents for every "Special" they deliver and if they deliver one letter that day they get nine centimes!

That Anagrams were popular in 1903, Mr. Woollcott!

That during the madness of George III, "King Lear" was not played on the English stage. Oh, you knew that? I see.

That Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" was once burned as an immoral tome. Tome, meaning book. Book meaning something to read!

That Richardson's "Pamela," printed by Franklin in 1744, was the first novel printed in America.

That "Annie Rooney" and "Down Went McGinty" are both said to be pirated, thefted, stolen (or column'd) from Bach.

That Jenny Lind's kids were not particularly musical.

That Mrs. Stowe received only $300 for the serial rights to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and nothing for the stage rights.

That women were first seen as actors in 1661.

That no poet before William Shakespeare ever introduced a person walking in his sleep. (Am I gettin' too litt'ry?)

That if you rub a sliced onion over the windshield of your car with an up and down stroke, mist won't collect on rainy days.

That Danville, Ky., was the first seat of civil government west of the Allegheny Mountains.

That chorus girls get more salary than chorus boys.

That the largest wine cask in the world was in the cellar of Heidelberg Castle. It was capable of holding 49,000 gallons.

That Florida autos have the license only on the rear.

That, beg pardon, it was Mrs. Alexander Hamilton who introduced ice cream to these good old United States (get that George Cohan touch!)

That "women and children first" doesn't mean anything in the life of our President. He precedes the First Lady on all occasions. Mrs. Harding, frixample, was politely barred from the White House elevator the first time she tried to enter it ahead of Gamaeliel.

That there is supposed to be a statue or bust of Chauncey Depew somewhere in or on the Grand Central Station—but where?

That olive oil will prevent brass articles from becoming tarnished. (Aw, let the brass-cleaners get sore!)

That of the 4,300 species of flowers cultivated in Yurrup only 420 of them possess an agreeable perfume.

That finely powdered pumice stone mixed with vinegar will cleanse your tombstones. (Oooh, skeletons and ghosts—BOOO!)

That no matter how many stars you see in the sky tonight or any other night it will rain if it feels like it.

And that the worst ten years of a woman's life are those between twenty-nine—and thirty.

WATER, TALK, ACTION AND BARRYMORE IN WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

John Barrymore is chasing an elusive whale down on the Warner screen in "Moby Dick," a talking version of the Herman Melville novel. This is the same story that Mr. Barrymore "did" back in the silent days. Then it was known as "The Sea Beast."

The plot, you recall, is all about a young whaler, who meets love ashore and tragedy at sea. He gets a peg leg and becomes an embittered man. And he swears vengence on the creature that has so maimed him—a giant white-spotted whale, known as Moby Dick.

The picture is a thrilling display. It spills adventure and water all around. And when the whalers yell "thar she blows," the action is unconfined. The illusion of reality is retained most of the time, also. And in those moments when Mr. Barrymore's cries register physical pain, you wish he wasn't such a realist.

HERO OF MAY MOODS

Mr. Barrymore is an actor capable of many moods. And the film affords many opportunities for his talents. He is the carefree and the boyish one—(the wild one, as an old-maid character has it). He is the drunkard-swallowing liquor a quart at a time. He is the Romeo—bashful, yet ardent. He is the seaman—boisterous and courageous. He is the scoffer—laughing at religion and life. He is the mad man—torn by an insane passion for revenge. And, in the end, he is the man who finds himself.

But even a Barrymore isn't a great enough actor to make the Moby Dick death sequence convincing. Far out at sea, right onto the back of the whale, Mr. Barrymore clambers. Jab, jab, jab—deeper and deeper he shoves the harpoon into the whale's inside. This, ladies and gentlemen, is the grand climax, the big melodramatic moment. But it calls for a quiet smile. It is so much like a "movie."

HEROINE GROWS OLDER

Joan Bennett puts her fragile beauty into the heroine role. What she has to do most is just to wait; wait through the seasons and the years; wait for a man to come back from sea. And she waits well. She grows a little older—a little sadder, perhaps. But the love light in her eyes never dims. Her faith never wavers.

Lloyd Hughes is present as a younger brother of Hero Barrymore. He grows older, too, like the hero and the heroine, as the years pass. And not so many reels spin through the projecting machine before he appears wearing a black mustache. Which is significant. He is the villain of the story.

In fewer words, "Moby Dick" is above all things a motion picture. It is action and movement all the time. And it succeeds in making live again the old days of sailing ships.

Irving Berlin May Publish Movie Song Written by Charlie Chaplin

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 25.

News that Charlie Chaplin has composed a song for his picture, "City Lights," has brought the comedian a flood of offers from music publishers.

Irving Berlin heard the song, "Beautiful, Wonderful Eyes," and did his utmost to persuade Charlie to let him put it on the market immediately. Charlie is withholding a release, however, until the picture is ready to be shown.

When will that be? Ask me another. The entire synchronization remains to be done. Charlie thinks this is going to be a simple job, but he is notably particular about music. I wouldn't put it past him to complete a musical score and then remake part of the picture to suit it.

Charles Chaplin

His own song will be the recurring love theme in the score.

Incidentally, it appears as though Irving Berlin might win the publishing rights.

RIGHT THE FIRST TIME

Robert Montgomery says that he noticed an elderly couple staring at him the other night in a supper club. Finally, they rose to go. As they passed by, the old gentleman smiled.

"Pardon us for staring," he said, "but my wife thought you were Robert Montgomery, the film actor."

H. B. WARNER CAST

Due to a temporary delay in the production of "luxury," H. B. Warner will play in "The Princess and the Plumber" for Fox.

This is the Alice Duerr Miller story that will be directed by Alexander Korda.

Charles Farrell and Maureen O'Sullivan take the principal roles in the film. Warner supports them in the part of a European prince.

OTHER WOMAN LEADS HUSBAND ASTRAY IN HARRIS

By KAYE GODARD

"Lawful Larceny," featuring Bebe Daniels and Lowell Sherman who also directed it, plays this week in the Harris.

The plot concerns the young woman whose husband had lost all his money and gone badly into debt because of another woman. The wife uses all sorts of means to keep his love.

Kenneth Thomson, formerly of Pittsburgh, plays the part of the husband. The acting is all done in a most creditable manner, that of Lowell Sherman being particularly clever. It's an unusually entertaining and refreshing performance.

Victor Graff and the B. K. Ohlans present a fair stage show in which the Carr sisters and Jack Harrison are featured.

MELODRAMA TONIGHT ON GOLDEN ROD BOAT

"Driven From Home," a melodrama, opens tonight on Capt. Menke's Golden Rod Showboat, located in the Allegheny River at the Montrose Hotel landing. The presentation marks the sixth week of Capt. Menke's local engagement.

In addition to the three acts of the play, there will be vaudeville numbers, featuring Genesta, heralded as "the wonder man," and Vic Faust, the Swiss bellringer.

2 Young Men Badly Hurt in Auto Wreck

RIDGWAY, Pa., Aug. 25.—(AP)—Howard Stein, 24, suffered a broken back and Harold J. Wollaston, 20, lacerations and spinal injuries when their automobile left a road in a heavy fog and turned over several times.

Both were unconscious after the crash, but Wollaston revived and made his way to a farm house, where persons were found who took the pair to a hospital.

Plan to Rehabilitate Island of Laysan

HONOLULU, T. H.—(INS)—An attempt to rehabilitate the island of Laysan, which lies 1,000 miles west of Honolulu, will be made by Dr. Gerrit P. Wilder, Honolulu naturalist, who sailed recently for the island aboard the United States coast and geodetic survey ship Pioneer.

For several years rabbits flourished in large numbers on Laysan, practically destroying all vegetation on it. Prior to that time it had been a natural habitat for sea fowl, but with plant life gone it was too hot for the sea fowl to lay and hatch their eggs.

From Pittsburgh to Bedford
99 "road miles"

but there are only 79 "engine miles" with free wheeling

Your engine "rests" 2 miles out of 10 when you're free wheeling

WITH Free Wheeling, when you have traveled 10,000 miles—your engine has actually "worked" only 8,000 miles. Not only is engine and chassis wear reduced, but you save 12 to 20 per cent in gasoline and oil. Free Wheeling with positive gear control does more than save money . . . this great engineering evolution, manufactured under Studebaker patents, and obtainable only in the New Series President and Commander Eights, brings to motoring a sense of freedom it has never known and never can know without free wheeling.

Free Wheeling makes gear changing astonishingly easy and quiet. You can shift, back and forth between second and high, and never touch the clutch! In fact, you need use the clutch only to start or back up.

What will thrill you most in Free Wheeling is the consciousness of a new kind of power . . . power liberated from mechanical constraints . . . yet with the full braking power of your engine instantly available just as in conventional cars.

Highway commissioners, safety directors throughout the country have voiced approval of Free Wheeling, with positive gear control.

Come, treat yourself to this driving thrill! Try Free Wheeling, the culmination of 78 years of Studebaker leadership in continually transforming transportation into something incomparably better.

You shift from high to second, back and forth, at 40—50 miles an hour, and never touch the clutch. You need use the clutch only to start or back up.

The braking power of your engine is available as readily as in conventional cars.

For the first time in a motor car you get the full benefit of momentum automatically. When your car has gone 10,000 miles your engine has "worked" only 8,000 miles.

You save 12 to 20 per cent on gasoline and oil—even more in heavy traffic.

Strains on engine, transmission and axle are lessened. Tires wear longer.

There is nothing new to learn—Free Wheeling with positive gear control is simplicity itself. You drive just as you do in a conventional car.

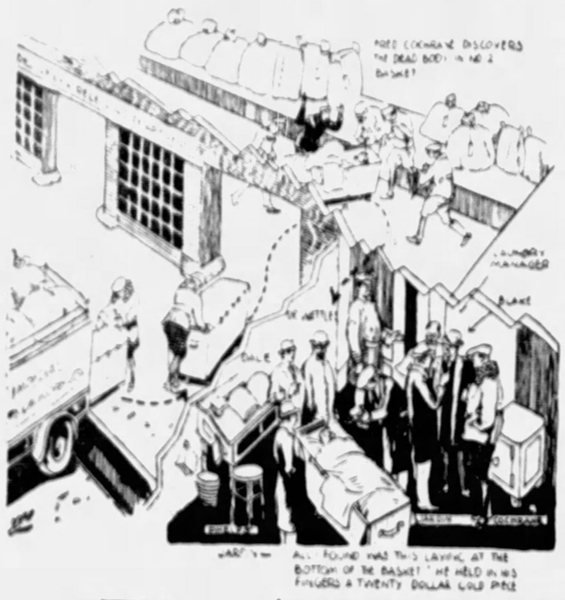
The Body in the Basket



FRED COCHRANE DISCOVERS THE DEAD BODY IN NO. 2 BASKET
LAUNDRY MANAGER
BLAKE
DALE
HARRY
ALL I FOUND WAS THIS LAYING AT THE BOTTOM OF THE BASKET.' HE HELD IN HIS FINGERS A TWENTY DOLLAR GOLD PIECE

CHAPTER I.

It was shortly before Christmas. Robin Dale sat in the city room of the Daily Journal visioning a peaceful holiday season into which was entwined more than a fair share of good spirits and jolly comradeship, climaxing with a New Year's Eve jamboree to start at his apartment and end no one knew where.

Elbert Bailey was on the city desk, frowning and thinking deeply of a new subject for a Yuletide editorial.

Dale's pleasant picture was rudely shattered when Capt. Blake called him from police headquarters.

"If you want to see something pleasant," the captain of the homicide squad remarked, with a promising ring in his voice, "get right over to the Imperial Laundry. Their plant's at Forty-fifth near Third avenue. Don't stop to ask questions now; I'll meet you there in 20 minutes."

In less than 20 minutes Robin Dale was at the laundry.

The establishment occupied the entire structure, built especially for them the greater portion of its surface made of huge windows. It was typical of what is known as a daylight factory.

At the northern end of the building was the receiving and delivery department. This consisted of an open court, under one corner of the building into which the delivery trucks drove to load and unload. A platform, extending the entire length of the court, gave through half a dozen doors into the interior of the receiving department.

Robin Dale found three policemen on duty at this open court, to prevent anyone from entering or leaving it. There were two trucks backed against the platform, but all activity, so far as unloading or loading was concerned, was at a standstill.

Dale scarcely had time to chat with one of the policemen for more than a moment when Capt. Blake drove up in the police car. Sergt. Jardin, Phelps, the fingerprint expert; Dr. Wattles, the police doctor, and the police photographer were in the car.

Dale joined the group as they entered the building. One of the officers on guard led them to the office of the receiving department. The room was not more than 10 feet square. Three men were present, a police officer, the manager of the receiving department and one of the drivers. The manager quickly made the explanation.

"This is Fred Cochrane," he said, motioning to the driver. "He just returned with a load. You know our wagons are fitted with four large baskets which slide into the trucks and completely fill them. The laundry is collected and put into these baskets. They are like the one you see here."

The manager pointed to a long wicker basket which was on the floor. Dale surveyed it. The top was over it; a hinged top that swung open. It was obviously the full length of the truck, possibly seven or eight feet long and almost three feet deep and about the same width. The manager was going on with his explanation.

"Cochrane came in with his load. We usually slide the baskets out and assort and tag the laundry. As the second basket was taken out and opened we found in it the body of a dead man!"

There was a vibrant, frightened note in his voice as he finished. Without a word Capt. Blake went to the basket and threw back the cover. Laid out, as in a casket, was the body of a man. Blood covered the side of the face, blood no longer flowing but matted in the hair and caked on the cheek. There was a huge crimson spot at the breast and the torn, frayed edges of the rent shirt showed that a frenzied attack with a not over-sharp instrument had been made. It looked as though this attack had been made upon a man rendered unconscious by a terrific blow on the head.

Capt. Blake made a sign to Jardin who proceeded with a careful search of the body for identification. During this procedure Blake questioned the driver. Robin Dale was most interested in this questioning.

"You're positive the baskets were empty this morning?"

"I didn't look. We pick up our trucks at the company garage and don't usually inspect the baskets always assumin' they're empty," replied Cochrane, the driver.

"Remember filling the basket while on your route? If you did it must have been empty."

"I can't be sure. It was the lower basket on the right side lookin' in from the back of the truck. You see, by pulling on the baskets I can tell if they're full so that one felt loaded when I tugged on it."

The driver was evidently neither quick-witted nor clear-minded. Captain Blake put a number of questions to him regarding this phase of the affair, but could not definitely ascertain whether Cochrane had even looked into the basket that day. It was, of course, an effort to make certain whether the body had been placed in the basket during that morning or some time during the previous night while the truck was in the garage. However, this point remained still in doubt.

"Got a list of your calls this morning?" asked Captain Blake, finally.

"I just made four stops—the Claire Hotel, the Brighton Apartments, Deauville Court, which is another apartment, and the Ingraham Manufacturing Company. They're all in the neighborhood of Sixth avenue and Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets, the Ingraham plant was the last. I got loaded up there an' came back here before starting on the next route."

By this time Jardin had completed his investigation.

"No marks of any kind, Captain," he said to Blake. "Papers all taken out of the pockets, everything cleaned out. All I found was this, lying in the bottom of the basket."

He held in his fingers a twenty-dollar gold piece.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The rajahs of radio are ever alert in transferring to the front parlors of the land the more significant aspects of American civilization. The lesser phases of the hilarious and kaleidoscopic spectacle that stretches from Gotham to the Golden Gate have yet, however, to be awarded missionary representation.

Let us turn the binoculars on the grist of the American scene and see what can be utilized by radio's alert stalkers.

Why not, in this age of commercialism, a broadcast from the leading cigaret indorser of Newport, the principal perfume indorser of Southampton, the most conspicuous sun-tan indorser of Hollywood. With indorsing now possessing the status of big business, there ought to be room on the radio for its more prominent representatives. What does an indorser do in his spare time? How does he spend his rewards?

The process of infinitely varied might also include that diplomat of the news reels who succeeded in persuading John D. to pose for a picture, the justice of the peace in Houston, Tex., who has issued only one bride out of 7,000, the policeman who answers foolish questions at Broadway and Forty-second street, the richest conductor of "rooms for tourists" on the Boston Post road, the first Japanese to carry a camera into the West Point reservation, the champion pancake demolisher of Ludlow, Vt., the first woman to eat pate de foie gras in Salina, Kan., the last woman to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel.

Why Not Marriage Talk By H. L. Mencken?

It might embrace also H. L. Mencken, the former bad boy of Baltimore and the cause of his change of attitude toward the marital state; the justice of the peace in Catskill hamlets who collects the largest fines from speeding motorists, the man who invented nut sundaes, the most successful rum sniffer on the Canadian border, the next-door neighbors in Northampton who remember the Coolidges when they were merely a justice of the peace and his wife, the chief illusion-provider of that last seacoast of Bohemia that is sometimes called Hoboken, the most successful antique saleswoman in Concord, N. H., the most wistful recaller of the glory of New York and San Francisco before Volstead stomped out of the West.

Such programs would go a long way toward satisfying those eat-cuppers who are wearied of jazz tenors, soprano quartets and string ensembles. Cross sections of American life distant from the music masters of Broadway and Hollywood should have a place on the broadcasting schedules, or we are talking more than ever through our gray derby.

There is also a place, yet to be filled, for Mrs. Coolidge and her memories of the White House, Bobby Jones and his golf battles, George Jean Nathan and the plays he has sat through to the sweetened end, Big Bill Thompson and a revival of the speech in which he warned King George to keep his "snout out of Chicago," Mrs. Gann in a recital of the political strategy in which, aiming at the White House, she obtained the vice presidential throne for brother Charley, the forgotten drug store keeper in Dayton, Tenn., who started the monkey controversy that was heard around the world.

Best Jazz Still Written in America

Jazz continues to be the only form of musical expression that erects racial bards against successful interpretation. The best jazz is still written in America, despite the pretensions of the Germans as the first in the field with a jazz opera.

Radio Resurrects Forgotten Songs

Had a Senate investigating committee asked us three months ago if the radio men had completed their resurrection of old tunes we would have answered with a vehement "yes." Today we would be more conservative. No sooner do we believe that every song known to Damrosch or the devil has been aired than we come upon fresh evidence to the contrary.

The National Broadcasting Company has an imposing collection of these old tunes under lock and key. It is like a trip to museum to gaze upon them, all of them expressing the yearning of man for romance.

Colored singers and instrumentalists are crowding closer and closer to the microphones not as worshipers of the great god jazz, but as interpreters of the more serious musical efforts of their race. But I see nowhere in the procession the commanding figures of Paul Robeson and Roland Hayes.

LOCAL FANS HEAR CHINA

A new record for rebroadcasting radio programs was established by KDKA through the co-operation of VK2ME, Sidney, Australia this morning when the two stations united in rebroadcasting a program originating in the studio of the transmitting station in Saigon, French Indo-China. The signals of the China station were picked up by VK2ME, Sidney, Australia, and transmitted to KDKA's receiving station near Pittsburgh, from where it was sent back to Australia, and at the same time broadcast on the standard wave of KDKA for the general public to hear. Signals from the China station were actually transmitted over a distance of 22,334 miles.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor

Attractions in tonight's theater of the air include the inaugural program of The Revellers with General Motors Family Party, the Navy Band, Henry Burbig's historical allusions, Arabesque, Toscha Seidel and the customary concert by the Rochester Civic Orchestra for Stromberg-Carlson Hour.

The Revellers plan to "Strike Up the Band" on WCAE at 9:30. Equally versatile with the classicists, the quartet will then turn to Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor."

* * *

Jimmie Carr's Orchestra is a feature on KQV at 10 o'clock. This group has returned from the Silver Slipper in New York where they broadcast several times over the Columbia System.

QUESTION A DAY:

Ethel Barry, Ambridge—Can you give me the exact dates when the different Pittsburgh stations were established?

A.—KDKA was established November 2, 1920; KQV, October 12, 1921; WCAE, May 5, 1922; WJAS, August 4, 1922.

We've received several questions concerning Arabesque, the Columbia feature on WJAS at 9. This drama was formerly written by Yolande Langworthy, who now has her studios at 434 West One Hundred and Twentieth street, New York. The program originates in New York. David Ross is the announcer. Principal actors are Georgia Backus and Bradford Browne.

Thanks to Clifford Porter, Greensburg; Philip A. Frubrer, East Liverpool, O.; Samuel English, Coraopolis; V. N. R., Wilkinsburg; "Helen Reilley" for their very nice comments about "We Now Present."

Madame Schumann-Heink is to be heard over KDKA for 17 consecutive Sunday nights starting September 7.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Every orchestra that broadcasts over KDKA does one number better than any other if popular requests are any criterion. "If I Could Be With You One Hour Tonight" is the prevailing selection for Bob Meeker. Don Bestor fans never tired of hearing his band play "Wedding of the Painted Doll." Tom Gerun almost danced himself weary with tears in his eyes while Jack Denny listeners responded favorably to "The Moon Is Low."

Growing to Order

The public asks for more A&P

The tales Americans are the produest of are those of poor boys who rose to greatness, and of modest business ventures that became great industries.

Like many early American businesses, A & P was once small but hopeful—a single little store. About all A & P could call its own in 1859 was its red painted front and the belief that women like good food at low prices.

The first A & P store was a busy store—so busy that a second store was added, then a third; and . . . the little business grew up. It became a leader among food merchants, slowly and naturally, unaided by vast capital or mergers.

Ask yourself why A & P grew . . . It grew because the public accepted and encouraged A & P's methods of doing business. The A & P store in your neighborhood is there because great numbers of women want it there.

A & P is a little store that made good.

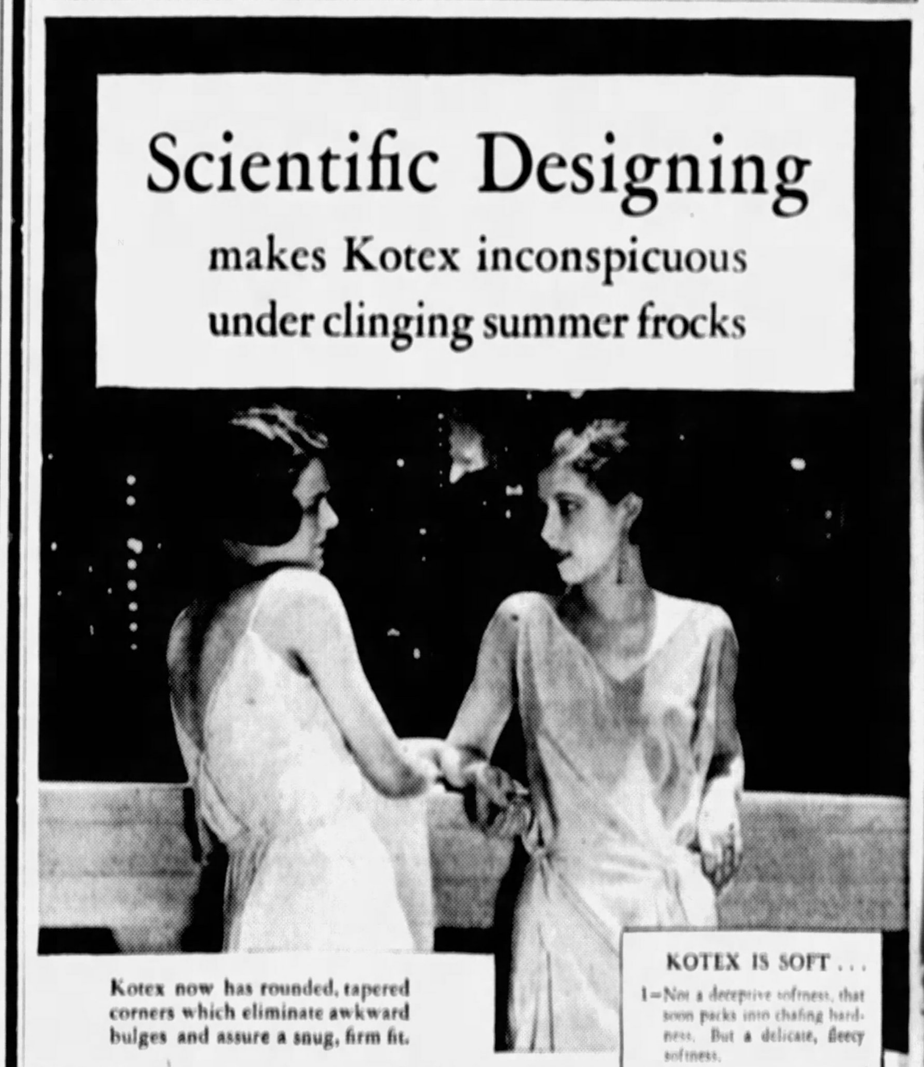
Scientific Designing

makes Kotex inconspicuous
under clinging summer frocks



Kotex now has rounded, tapered corners which eliminate awkward bulges and assure a snug, firm fit.

THERE are times when you hesitate to wear your lightest, thinnest summer dresses . . . unless you know about Kotex.

Kotex is the sanitary pad that is designed for inconspicuous protection. The corners are rounded and tapered. Sides, too, are rounded. There's not a single square-cut edge.

Wear Kotex without a worry, then, under any frock you possess. Wear it on hot summer days, when you've reduced your clothing to a minimum.

Light, cool, comfortable

There's another way in which this careful shaping brings wonderful relief. Kotex is so much more comfortable. There's no unneeded bulk to pack and chafe. No awkward bulges to grow terribly uncomfortable.

Kotex is always light, always cool, always comfortable. This is largely due to its remarkable filler—Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding. Cellucotton is five times more absorbent than cotton. This means your Kotex pad can be five times lighter than any cotton pad, for the same absorbency and protection. America's leading hospitals—85% of them—choose this same absorbent for important surgical work.

Kotex deodorizes. And it is disposable, just like tissue. Kotex Company, Chicago, Ill.

KOTEX IS SOFT . . .

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, fleecy softness.

2—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

3—Deodorizes . . . safely, thoroughly, by a special process.

4—Disposable, instantly, completely.

Kotex Super-Size—65c for 12

GLIDER RECORD NOW 101 MILES

WASSERKUPPE, Germany, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The world's distance record for glider flying was broken by Robert Kronfeld, Austrian glider expert, who made a flight of 101 miles.

It was the second time that Kronfeld had broken the record during the international glider meet here. His previous record was 93 miles, on August 14.

He set out in his glider "Wien" and six hours later fluttered to earth at Markfredwitz, 101 miles from his starting point.

BELGIAN RIOTS TAKE BIG TOLL

BRUSSELS, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Fifty persons were injured in a riot at a war anniversary ceremony at Dixmude. An airplane flew over the crowd throwing down pamphlets accusing Flemish ex-service men of cowardice.

Flemish extremists immediately retaliated by burning two Belgian flags, and rioting broke out.

At Ostend many also were injured in disturbances rising from a similar cause. Two thousand extremists compelled onlookers to salute the Flemish anthem. One hundred persons were arrested.

THREE ADRIFT IN GALE SAVED

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Three Portland, Me., fishermen, who had been missing in their 33-foot power boat since Thursday night, when they put out for Jeffreys Ledge, were towed in here by Portsmouth Harbor coast guardsmen. They sighted the disabled boat wallowing in mountainous seas two miles southeast of the Wallis Sands Station.

The three fishermen, Capt. Antonio Raduano, 26; Cimino Antonio, 30, and Rasari Cino, 23, had been adrift for 60 hours in the worst northwest storm of the summer.

The coast guardsmen found them near collapse, without food and fresh water. They had bailed feverishly to keep the craft afloat after the engine went dead shortly after they had put out on Thursday.

Humane-Journalism Prize Won by Genoan

GENOA, Italy, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—The will of Serafino Alimonda, who was a citizen of Genoa, provides an annual award to a newspaper of Rome or Genoa for the best article regarding children and animals—"dependent creatures of God." The Genoa Lavoro is the first winner. Its prize article urged journalism to refrain from accounts of arrests and trials of minors, whether guilty or innocent.

U. S. SIFTS NEED OF '31 CROPS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—President Hoover's drought relief committee turned its attention today to the problem of financing through another crop season.

A vast federal-state credit system for aiding farmers through this year and the planting season next year will be determined at a conference here tomorrow between banker-members of the President's commission and financiers from the various states.

The President's advisers will propose that each state or each section in the affected areas organize its own credit corporation, financed by local funds to lend cash to needy farmers on crop liens. The Federal Intermediate Credit Banks will discount such paper, thus relieving the local organizations of the burden of credit. This program would make available some $500,000,000, although government authorities predict $50,000,000 will meet the problem.

The government will be represented in these negotiations by Ogden L. Mills, under-secretary of the Treasury; Paul Bester, Fed-Roy A. Young, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and Henry W. Robinson, Los Angeles banker.

HATFIELD, LAST IN FEUD, BURIED

LOGAN, W. Va., Aug. 24 (AP).—William Anderson "Cap" Hatfield, last of the active participants in the bloody Hatfield-McCoy feuds of the 80's, was buried here yesterday. He died Friday in a Baltimore hospital at the age of 87.

"Cap" Hatfield was laid to rest under a grove of sugar trees, a favorite spot on his homestead and less than a mile from the resting place of his father, "Devil Anse" Hatfield, who led his clan in eight years of mountain warfare with the McCoys of Kentucky.

Funeral services were conducted by a cousin, the Rev. Joseph Hatfield, of Matewan, W. Va.

talked-of medicine. The Konjola Man at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, is prepared to tell you all about this master-medicine. Now read the interesting statement of Mr. Charles M. Martz, 101 East Montgomery Avenue, Pittsburgh:

"For six months I was in a badly run down condition and suffered from stomach trouble. I had tried different kinds of medicine and did not seem to get any better. Through friends I heard of the results people were getting from Konjola. Up to this time I have taken four bottles of this medicine. Before I finished the third bottle I could see that I was getting results. I sleep and eat better and I seem to have a great deal more "pep." The reason I am endorsing this medicine is because it has done exactly what the Konjola Man said it would. I really think it is a wonderful medicine."

Konjola is free from alcohol, nerve-deadening drugs or heart depressing chemicals. It is all pure medicine and every drop works. Even infants can take Konjola.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily. Konjola is sold also at all Dow drug stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

BLACKHANDERS BOMB 2 RANKIN HOMES

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

All entertainment in the City-County Building these last few days has been supplied by City Solicitor Waldschmidt, a gentleman who won our admiration by appearing publicly with a blackened eye. Four persons have told us of the darkened optic, so it must have some interest. The solicitor has had to submit to embarrassing questions from his colleagues, but we know the inside story. Mr. Waldschmidt was fishing with a friend in Conneaut Lake. The friend, in cranking the outboard motorboat in which they sat, swung an elbow rather freely. The elbow met the city solicitor's eye, and you can guess the rest. This should set at rest reports that our city solicitor had been in an argument with a city solicitor from Cleveland, or some place.

We have just been reading the list of Pittsburghers registered in Who's Who in America and by our reading we have established a kind of bond with Dr. Carl W. Petty, the clergyman. Dr. Petty's name is the nearest approach to Pfarr in the book, each of us having one letter in common. There are approximately 300 Pittsburghers in the book. County Commissioner E. V. Babcock is found right under the B's, but neither of his colleagues, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. McGovern, is present. The first Pittsburgher is Marcus Aaron, because of his alphabetical fortune, and the last is Warren F. Teel, the educator. No, that's wrong. Mr. Teel is from Reading. The last Pittsburgher is A. E. Young, "mathematics." Harrison Nesbit, the banker, can be found between Edmund W. Mudge, manufacturer, and H. A. Nomer, educator. The Mellons, with five entrants, take the family honors, even over the Smiths and Millers. And there is not one Jones. We were about to write that A. S. Coggeshall was the only palaeontologist listed when we discovered O. A. Peterson. The Mayor, too, is listed. His biography shows that he is a member not only of the Duquesne Club, but also the University Club, to say nothing of the P. A. A., Pittsburgh Country Club, Longue Vue Country Club, Oakmont Country Club, Ashtabula (O.) Country Club, Madison Golf Lakelands Country Club and, among others, the Elks and the Moose.

Harry Laufman, who is now with the Heinz Company, is a former newspaperman who can tell you of the hand-set days. Mr. Laufman will never forget the cub reporter he sent out to cover a story for the old Pittsburgh Leader. This was a dozen years ago and Mr. Laufman was the city editor.

The story had to do with the funeral of a one-time newspaperman who had been killed in the World War. A year or two before his death he had won, in a contest, a season pass to Mr. Dreyfuss's Forbes Field. After the cub had written his story Mr. Laufman suggested that he put a one-line headline over it. The cub did. The head he wrote was:

"LOCAL BOY WINS BASEBALL PASS."

The Islam women in Jerusalem have asked their government to take their veils off and allow the bride and bridegroom to see each other before marriage. It won't do 'em any good. We don't use 'em over here, but you would think we did.

Big bootlegger in Seattle on trial, spoke of some of the deals pulled off at last year's bootleggers' convention. There is one convention these chambers of commerce ought to go out for. The Elks or the Shriners or the Bankers wouldn't be in it with that one. Imagine all railroads advertising excursions to the annual bootleggers' convention where they will give away samples.

WILL.

Cathie Page Exultant at Securing First Job

CHAPTER I.

Cathie Paige pulled the skirt of her trim tailored suit a little farther over her knees, and coaxed her hat to what she hoped was its most becoming angle. Then she fixed her eyes on the door marked "Alfred A. Farnsworth, Private," and settled herself to wait.

At least she tried to settle herself. She would sit perfectly still for 30 seconds, then she would take a furtive peek into the tan envelope purse she carried and there would be a jingle of coins, and out would come a small, round mirror and powderpuff. Another dusting of powder over her nice, straight little nose, another anxious glance at the door, and another period of motionless waiting.

It was plain that she expected Alfred Farnsworth to jump out of his door at any moment, and she wanted to be looking her best when he did it. She was so intent on the door, and in preparing to make a good impression on the unseen gentleman behind it, that she failed to notice that she was not alone in the room.

It was a large room, all solid mahogany and thick green carpet. The kind of room that says, "I belong to a successful man. A busy man. One that doesn't care much whether you sit and wait or not. You can take your affairs elsewhere if you like; we have more important things at hand."

But the other occupant of the room did not respond to its psychic message at all. He was, if anything, more arrogant, more expensively gotten up, more indifferent to public opinion than the room.

Cathie Studied
Young Man Observes Her Closely

He leaned back in his chair, long legs stretched out straight ahead of him, enjoying the utmost comfort that its austere, leather upholstered elegance afforded. He was a man in the late twenties, his powerful athlete's body and ruddy, bronzed complexion at variance with the Bond street perfection of his clothes. Tweed clothes of a soft, indescribable heather gray, blended into the mauve of shirt and the deeper, more purple tones of scarf and handkerchief. But if his general appearance was arrogant, there was nothing arrogant about the broad, good natured grin that spread over his dark, acqueline features as he watched the unconscious girl.

A girl applying for a job, her first job, he decided. She was too young to have had many jobs, and she was too nervous, too restless for a seasoned campaigner. Not a day over 18, younger perhaps. She had the air of having dressed up in an older person's clothes. The trim blue suit and black hat were much too old for her, and yes . . . the suit was a little large . . . borrowed for the occasion, most likely!

Gordon Moore's white teeth flashed in frank enjoyment of his own detective powers. Little laughter lines appeared at each side of his shrewd, deep set eyes. He felt a kind of kinship with the girl. He'd have liked to say, "Hello, sis!" to pull off her tight hat and rumple the fair hair squeezed under it, as he would if she were a little boy.

Puzzled
Moore Wonders About Girl's Circumstances

She looked a little like a boy, with her round necked white blouse with its black silk tie, and her slim, straight shoulders under the slightly too large suit. There was something refreshingly boyish about the faint trail of freckles over her nose, and the clarity and candor of her eyes.

They were blue eyes. The translucent flower-blue that usually belongs to childhood

TWO ELOPERS ACCUSED AS BIGAMISTS

Charges Aganist Men Follow Marriages of Pittsburgh Girls at Wellsburg, W. Va.

Paul Daniel O'Donnell, of San Francisco, charged in the Morals Court yesterday with having eloped and married Stella O'Neill, 7208 Trevella boulevard, last April, in Wellsburg, W. Va., while he was still married to Earine McClure, of California, was held for for preliminary hearing.

According to police reports, O'Donnell married Earine McClure in 1925, in San Francisco. His second wife appeared against him in the hearing yesterday and testified he passed as single before they eloped.

Constables from the office of Alderman John Kearcher, of the South Side, today were continuing their search for Albert E. Patterson, 23, of Glenwood, from whom authorities want an explanation, they say, as to why he married Anna Capple, 18, of 1602 Sarah street, without first obtaining a divorce from his first wife, Helen Hennine.

On July 26, Patterson met Miss Capple at a picnic at Conneaut Lake. The courtship lasted three days and they eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va. For three weeks they lived at the home of the bride's parents. Patterson appeared at intervals, claiming he was busy at work. An investigation revealed he was married on July 10, 1929 to Helen Henning, the second wife charges.

Patterson, growing suspicious, is believed to have left town before charges could be made by Miss Cappie's parents.

'COUNTRY LIFE' MEET SLATED

More than a score of civic, agricultural and educational organizations in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland will be represented at the regional "country life conference" to be held next Saturday at Mountain Lake Park, Md. Gray Silver, a member of the Federal Farm Board, will be one of the speakers.

Nat T. Frame, director of the agricultural extension division of West Virginia University and secretary of the Country Life Association of America, called the conference. It is held to bring the attention of the organizations to the interdependence of city and country life and to organize a common movement to promote prosperity in the districts represented by those in attendance.

2 TAKE CAR AS DRIVER HALTS

John Peterson, of 1102 Carson street, who stopped his automobile when an excited young man stepped to the side of Agnew road, Baldwin Township, and waved to him early today, found himself set upon by two armed highwaymen.

The youth who had waved him to a stop drew a revolver and ordered Peterson to the roadway. The pair drove off in his car, leaving Peterson to walk a half mile to the Carrick police station to report the theft.

Tree-Perching Kitten's Yowl Contest Ended

A black and white kitten which yowled disconcertingly from a tree top in front of 1104 Warrington avenue, was dislodged from its perch today after a tree-sitting contest that lasted two days and two nights.

Joseph Swift, James Wood and Peter Green, Bell Telephone Company linemen, brought the contest to an end after neighbors asked them to rescue the cat.

Swift shinned up the tree from a ladder held in place by his two companions. Frightened by Swift's approach, the kitten climbed to the topmost branches and jumped to the ground.

MAN CUT IN ROW OVER RUM DEBT

Three men arrested after their companion was slashed on the abdomen when he is said to have refused to pay a debt of $1 for a pint of moonshine, were held over at a hearing in the North Side Police Court yesterday. The victim, William Campbell, 28, of 2020 Preble avenue, was reported in a serious condition in St. John's Hospital.

Shortly after the cutting, which occurred in his room, police arrested John Kegler, 47, of 2010 Magnolia street, alleged to have done the cutting, and Arnold Leach, 37, and George Wallace, 26, both of the Preble avenue address. The latter two were held as material witnesses.

ALLEGED PURSE THIEF HELD

Arrested in connection with the theft of a purse containing $50 from Almaina Wyssier, of 910 Western avenue, Frank Bearl, of 928 North Lincoln avenue, was being held for a hearing in the Central Police Court today, according to police.

Bearl, police say, admitted the theft, which occurred while he was assisting the woman to place her automobile in a garage. He told detectives, they said, that the keys and valuable papers which he found along with the money, were thrown away.

Parachute Lowers Plane Safely in Test

DETROIT, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A parachute device to bring airplanes safely to the ground in emergencies operated successfully in a test conducted here today.

The apparatus, carried in a tube beneath the fuselage, lowered a plane from a height of 2,000 feet over Grosse Ile Airport. It finally dropped into a tree, adding a hazard which those in charge of the test had not contemplated. The plane, however, was only slightly damaged, and the pilot, Warren Smith, was not hurt. The apparatus used for a small biplane weighs less than 100 pounds.

Realistic Opera Roughing K. O.'s Actress

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—(INS.)—Virgilio Lazzari became a trifle too realistic in the second act of "The Love of Three Kings," and as a consequence Mme. Lucrezia Bori, noted prima donna, today was recovering from a lapse of consciousness which occurred on the Ravinia Opera stage Saturday night.

Lazzari, as Mme. Bori's father in the part of Fioja, threw her on a bench, and the opera star lost consciousness. At the close of the scene Mme. Bori was unable to answer the first curtain call.

HUSBAND, WIFE HELD IN KILLING

A Negro couple was being held by detectives today in connection with the fatal shooting Saturday night of Claude C. Skaggs, 43, of 1207 Gibson street, who was wounded while playing baseball with a neighbor's child.

Skaggs died in Mercy Hospital several hours after he had been shot, detectives say, by Louis Lewis, 43, of 1205 Gibbon street, in front of Skaggs' home. Lewis' wife, Mary, 40, also held, insisted on sitting in Skaggs' automobile and was boisterous, Skaggs told detectives after the shooting. The Lewis woman left when he objected, he said, but returned with her husband a short time later, according to detectives.

Skaggs was playing ball with Harry Bottles, 7, of 1209 Gibbon street, when Lewis approached and started an argument, it was said. The Negro drew a revolver from his pocket and fired twice.

2 Hurt As War Shell 'Hammer' Explodes

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A souvenir from a battlefield in France, shelved with other bric-a-brac, brought to a household here a grim reminder of its original purpose last night. Miss Genevieve Courter, 18, was troubled by a nail in her shoe. With her nephew, Dudley Garber, 17, she sought to flatten it, using a polished 37-millimeter projectile as a hammer. The shell exploded, tore the fingers from Garber's right hand, drove fragments of metal into his right side, and burned Miss Courter's face and eyes.

COLLECT FUNDS FOR SHOES

The Salavation Army is preparing for the collection of its annual shoe fund that will provide shoes for needy school children. The fund, sponsored by the Army with the endorsement of the Board of Public Education, helps to safeguard the health of poorer children by supplying them with proper footwear.

The average contribution of the school children is $3,500. The campaign has been operating for 20 years.

Stork to Visit Italian Royalty in January

BRUSSELS, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Princess Marie Jose, who is now the Princess of Piedmont, crown princess of Italy, is expecting birth of a baby who will be in the line of direct succession to the Italian throne. The child probably will be born in January.

She and Prince Humbert plan to spend the autumn in the Castle Raconiggi, resembling Glamis Castle, where a new British princess was born to the Duchess of York last week.

KITTANNING, Pa., Aug. 25.—Two were killed and two are in the Kittanning General Hospital when an automobile crashed into a hillside near Worthington late last night. The dead are Floyd McGlaughlin, 26, and Susie McPreagor, 25. Dean Ellwood, 26, and Leona McGreagor, 28, were injured. All were from Vandergrift. McGlaughlin was said by police to have been the driver.

BOTH HOUSES BURN, 2 HURT

Warning to Pay $500 Traced As Motive; 30 Negroes Residing Nearby Routed

A blackhand bomb, police say, early this morning destroyed two dwellings in Chartiers avenue, Rankin, made six families homeless and caused serious injury to a man and a boy. The injured are Samuel Mazzarelli, 33, and his nephew Frank Rossi, 16, both of 13 Chartiers avenue. They are in the Braddock General Hospital in critical condition from burns.

The Mazzarelli home, police believe, was bombed because of Mazzarelli's alleged failure to pay $500 as was demanded in a blackhand letter he received several weeks ago. The flames which followed the blast destroyed his dwelling and an adjoining one, both two-story frame structures, causing a loss of $15,000, according to Fire Chief Daniel O'Connell.

FIREMEN BURNED

Chief O'Connell and five other firemen of the Rankin department were burned slightly while fighting the blaze. O'Connell was treated for burns on the right foot and continued his work. The others also were treated at the scene. Both houses were burned virtually to their foundations, and none of the contents was saved.

The explosion rocked the neighborhood, breaking windows in several nearby homes and arousing residents. By the time firemen arrived, both houses were burning rapidly.

Mazzarelli and his nephew were alone in their home, both sleeping on the second floor. Mazzarelli's wife is confined to the Magee Hospital and a 12-year-old daughter has been staying with friends in East Liberty.

FELLED BY BLAST

Mazzarelli was aroused by a noise in the basement or on the first floor. He was preparing to descend when the explosion occurred, knocking him across the room. The nephew was awakened and the two made their way to the street, fighting flames and smoke.

As they staggered from the house, a passing motorist picked them up and took them to the hospital. There Mazzarelli reminded police of the warning he had received, which he said he had turned over to the Rankin authorities. About 30 persons, members of five Negro families, had reached safety when firemen and police arrived.

Victim of Rabies-Stricken Dog Refuses Treatment

Severly bitten by a mad dog, Mike Busko, 45, of 3429 East Carson street, South Side, has refused medical aid to prevent rabies. He arose from the operating table in West Penn Hospital and returned to his home after agreeing to be treated.

Busko was bitten three times on the right hand by his own dog Saturday night, and disregarded the advice of friends and family to have the wounds cauterized.

Shortly afterward, the dog bit Warren Watkins, 10, of 3461 East Carson street. The boy's injury was treated by a physician. William Jones, an agent of the Animal Rescue League, then made investigation, and took the dog to the West Penn Hospital, where examination showed the animal to be suffering from a severe case of rabies.

Jones prevailed upon Busko to go with him to the hospital yesterday, although still much against the man's wishes. Physicians there got him upon an operating table ready for treatment, but at the last moment, Busko violently rebelled, struggled to his feet, and walked out of the institution.

WEST VIRGINIA MINE TOWNS SEARCHED

Former Haunts Combed for Man Wanted in Killing of Two at Sacco Meeting

Washington County detectives and state police today were still searching West Virginia mining towns for Pietro Petrella, wanted for the slaying of two men at a Sacco-Vanzetti anniversary demonstration at Avella, Washington County Friday night. Petrella is believed to have returned to West Virginia, where he resided before moving to Avella.

Sergt. Frank Gleason of the state police and County Detective William B. Dinsmore are leading the search. They are watching former hangouts of Petrella in Morgantown and Fairmont as well as keeping in touch with authorities in the mining communities where he was known to have worked. Police of Ohio towns are also watching for Petrella. Yesterday Dinsmore checked reports that Petrella had gone to Fayette County but no trace of the man could be found.

George Harkoff, 35, and Steve Mina, 40, were the victims. They were shot down, police say, when they remonstrated with Petrella for jeering Mrs. Anna Harkoff, who was speaking at the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration. The bodies of the two men were taken from a funeral parlor yesterday to the Harkoff home in Avella.

GIRL, 8, KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY MACHINE

Woman Hurt in Crash Costing Lives of Four Children Dies; Mate Near Death

Eight-year-old Regina Ilek, of 207 Churchill avenue, McKees Rocks, was killed last night when struck by an automobile in Coraopolis boulevard near State avenue extension, Coraopolis, the coroner's office was informed. Andrew Regan, of 1315 Ivanhoe street, alleged driver, was released on $1,000 bond pending an inquest. The child was visiting her uncle, Thomas Berto, of State avenue extension.

Unaware that her four children had been killed a week ago, Mrs. T. Matthew Mahey, 33, of Glassport, died in a hospital at Meadville, Pa., from injuries suffered in the same accident. The father, still in a critical condition in the same hospital, has not yet been told of the death of his children nor of that of his wife.

The Mahey family were driving north from Pittsburgh on their vacation. Near Sagertown last Sunday, their machine collided with a truck. The children, whose ages ranged from three months to eight years, died within a few hours of the crash. They were buried Friday from their home in Glassport. Mrs. Mahey's body was brought to Glassport last night.

Peter Selapak, 43, of 1211 Berry street, Sheraden, and C. V. Walker, 35, of 1004 Fifth avenue, were cut and bruised last night when their machines collided at Western and Irwin avenues. Both were treated at the Presbyterian Hospital. Selapak was arrested for reckless driving. Walker was charged with violating the automobile laws and with being a suspicious person. Police say he drove through a red light and caused the accident. He was unable to show ownership to the machine he was driving, police say.

Five persons were cut and bruised this morning when their automobile was struck by that of a "hit-run" driver in East Ohio street near the Thirtieth street bridge. The injured are Leo Bender, of 2626 Norwood street, driver of the car, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kountz, of 258 Robinson street and their children Fred, Jr., 8 and Ella, 16. All received medical attention at the Allegheny General Hospital and were taken home.

Camera Question Box

Today's question—A former health commissioner of New York believes that men should wear fewer clothes to compete with women. What do you think of the plan?

MISS ELEANOR DUFFY Mc Washington — I think the plan is a good one. Women are much healthier now than they used to be and more so than a lot of men, which shows how beneficial fewer clothes can be.

Miss Duffy

DAVE FRISS, Shop Manager, East End—Well, in a way it's a good idea. It's at least a comeback to the women for invading the business world and taking men's positions and work.

Dave Friss

DEWARD McKENZIE, Shop Manager, Shady Side — Well, of course, that all depends on how cold it is, but I think as a general rule men could get along with fewer or lighter clothes. It wouldn't be at all harmful.

Deward McKenzie

MISS CATHERINE LAVONSKE, Typist, Clairton—It seems a good plan if it's carried out. Why should the men have to be uncomfortable with heavier clothing on any more than women? Women asserted themselves along that line and there's nothing to stop men from doing the same thing.

Miss Lavenske

MISS ANNE BRENLOWE, Typist, South Side—Yes, I think the plan a pretty good one. Women are much more comfortable since the amount of their clothing has been lessened, so why shouldn't the men be comfortable, too?

Miss Brenlowe

EARL KLEIN, Student, Homewood—I think it's a good idea. Clothes are more or less of a hindrance and, since the main idea today is to be as comfortable as possible, why not carry it out?

Earl Klein

ARMSTRONG'S NAME NOT ON COMMITTEE

Political tongues are wagging at the omission of State Senator James J. Coyne and County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong from the committee arranging a banquet in Hotel William Penn September 10 to welcome Mayor Charles H. Kline from his European vacation.

Without the aid of Coyne and Armstrong in the recent mayoralty election Kline might have made the trip to Europe as a private citizen and would not be welcomed with a 3,000-guest dinner, according to politicians.

Coyne's friends said he was invited to take part in the banquet, but emphatically declined to associate with other supporters of the Mayor.

County Commissioner Edward V. Babcock, who also gave valuable aid to Kline's re-election, has been given the silent treatment, according to the published lists of the various committees, along with all other elected county officials excepting Recorder Robert G. Woodside and Sheriff Cain.

City Controller J. P. Kerr was honored with a place on the reception committee in company with President of Council John S. Herron, the only member of that body who will have part in arranging the affair.

Shot in the chest, Thompson was dead when taken to the office of Dr. Randall Zimmerman, at 401 Annie street, Wilmerding. A cook and a counter man in the restaurant told police Thompson was falling to the floor as his assailant, gun in hand, fled down the street.

A few minutes after the fatal shooting, Wilmerding police under Capt. Richard Butler scoured the neighborhood but found no trace of the slayer. His description was then broadcast to adjacent boroughs.

The restaurant help told police that Thompson, the only patron in the place, had just finished eating when the slayer walked in. Thompson addressed the man and the fatal argument started, according to their statement to police.

TONG GUNS FAIL TO CHASE WING

The door of H. E. Wing's laundry, 922 Western avenue, was locked today. Outside police watched for rival tongmen who have emphasized, with death threats, their demands that Wing move.

But Wing hasn't moved. Inside the locked door the Chinaman is carrying on business as usual, and somewhere in Wing's jacket is a weapon to be used in case of an emergency.

Wing was alone in the shop today. His only employe, Yee Ken Wah, who was running the business for Wing, disappeared hurriedly last Friday, immediately after two gunmen from a rival tong entered the shop warning him, for the third time, to leave.

In reporting the affair to the police, Wing expressed the opinion the gunmen were employed by another laundry in the vicinity operated by a rival tongman.

Airplanes Asked as 'Eyes' For Erie's Rum Blockade

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Unmolested today in the Canadian waters of Lake Erie are four, possibly five ocean-going steamers laden with liquor. All are awaiting favorable opportunities to discharge cargoes to small boats, the duty of which will be to dash through the American cordon of coast guard boats, if possible, and land cargoes on the shores of New York, Pennsylvania or Ohio.

The situation was brought to the attention of Washington by M. W. Rasmussen, commander of the Coast Guard in this district, who asked that airplanes be sent to act as eyes for the rum chasers he commands.

Coast Guard boats, 75 in number, have been mobilized in American waters between points opposite Port Burwell, Ont., and Long Point, Ont. It was between these two ports that Lake Erie's rum row was established and it is supposed, still is being maintained.

The Vedas, recently seized by the Canadian government and permitted to sail away again after being fined $400, was the forerunner of Lake Erie's rum row.

American revenue craft are not permitted to patrol on the Canadian side of the lake's imaginary boundary line.

Duke Gains Backers In Anti-Soviet Plot

PARIS, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Figures close to the Grand Duke Cyril, claimant of the Russian throne, said today backers of the grand duke had joined with the bourgeois elements, led by Gen. Eugene Miller, for a world-wide propaganda program against the Soviet rulers of Russia.

Heretofore groups were unable to form a solid front against what they consider the "tottering" Soviet state. It is said the joining was hastened by reports that Kulaks—well-to-do peasants who have been oppressed by Communists—are ready to rebel in the region of Vladivostok.

SMART HEAD WILL EXPRESS INDIVIDUALITY IN MILLINERY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, AUG. 25.—Having a smart head this season is to be an easy matter, but one that will require some thought. For with all the myriad types of hats being offered there is such a distinct quality of individuality in the millinery mode that one is called upon to do some personal scrutinizing before making a selection. Not only must one's general features be considered but the coiffure and the hairline as well.

The woman who can wear the severe type of hat may think well of the beret developed as it is now without a bandeau and worn far back on the head. But she will be wise to permit a bit of cleverly arranged hair to protrude a little way over her cheeks. For those that find soft effects more flattering the double brim with its multitudinous expressions is recommended. As a matter of fact brims in general are accorded soft treatment, through the medium of materials used such as velvet and felt, and by their development the clever arrangement of woven stripe of the felt, one strip extending across the forehead and allowing the hair to show between it and the hat itself.

AN OUTSTANDING FEATURE of the current millinery mode is the one sided silhouette. Even in the smaller versions where brims do not offer the possibility of irregular lines, the one-sided effect obtains. An example of the chic attributes of this theme is seen in the red felt beret shown today. An interesting feature of this model is the smart effect brings to mind that feather trimmings are being seen frequently. Agnes is using quills in a contrasting color posed at the side or on the back of her Tyrolean hats. These quills are also not always of feathers but are now of chenille and again of tinsel or sundry materials. It is an interesting device for attaining youthful verve.

ANOTHER MANNER of handling the brim is seen in the close-fitting little affair of bottle green velvet with a sharply turned back brim which is covered with stitching. The jaunty little feather which completes her down with the butt of his revolver.

Saying "All right, I've had enough," Mrs. Kohler threw the man off his guard, then tried to seize his revolver and pull off his mask. Running to a hedge, she threw several diamond rings and other gems into the shrubbery. The scuffle alarmed the other robber and the two jumped into their car and fled.

Fears Gerard's 64 Too Materialistic

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Prof. Andrew G. Truxal of Dartmouth, is inclined to agree with James W. Gerard anent the leadership of the 64, but has regrets about concentration on materialistic things. In a sermon at the West Park Presbyterian Church he said:

"The youths of by-gone days have striven to become philosophers, statesmen, adventurers and soldiers, and it is true that some young men do now, but the young America is chiefly interested in becoming successful business executives."

Detective 'Shops' For Bomb; Man Goes to Jail

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Detective Canevari went shopping for a bomb last night.

The bomb squad was informed that dynamite was disappearing from construction jobs in the city. Canevari trailed a suspect, got chummy and said he was in the market for a bomb capable of blowing up a good-sized tenement. One was offered for $100. Canevari bought and paid.

So today Rozzaro Prosmerino, 35, was in jail.

NO WAGE CUTS, BUILDER SAYS

Emphatic denial was made today by the Booth & Flinn Co. that union carpenters had been laid off at the new Turtle Creek state bridge project, and non-union men substituted at a heavy cut in wages.

Carpenters' union representatives claim the construction company discharged the men, reduced wages of remaining workmen from $1.50 to 75 cents per hour and hired out-of-town labor.

W. J. Wiseman, of the Booth & Flinn Co., said construction projects of his organization were carried out on an open shop basis.

Denying the accusations, Wiseman said:

"No carpenter on that job makes less than $1 per hour. Some of them get $1.50 and possibly more. There is not an out-of-town man working there. All are Pittsburgh men."

There has been no reduction in wages of laborers on the Turtle Creek span project, Wiseman stated.

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 25.—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis has retired as an active official of the Loyal Order of Moose, an organization of which he has been the leader since 1907. He will continue as a member of the endowment fund committee and chairman of the board of governors of Mooseheart.

Joseph A. Jenkins, of Pittsburgh, who has been Davis' secretary in Moose work, has been made a director of the organization of the lodge. Fred Jones, of Pittsburgh, is to be secretary of the endowment fund, Davis said.

"I want to see the lodge continue to grow while I am alive, but feel that I do not have the time to give to the work."

The board of governors assigned 30 children to Mooseheart and 10 people to Moosehaven.

Scientists Unearth Grave Of Prehistoric Indian

(By Radio to the Associated Press.)

LA CLOCHE ISLAND, Georgian Bay, Ontario, Aug. 25.—An Indian chief, buried with all his treasures 500 to 1,000 years ago, has been found by archeologists of the McDonald-Warren Foundation expedition exploring ancient graves in this area.

The skeleton will be removed to the Warren Foundation at Three Oaks, Mich., together with the treasure taken from the grave.

Dr. George R. Fox, archeologist, who headed the party of scientists that came here from Chicago last month aboard the yacht Mizpah, in command of Eugene F. McDonald, Chicago explorer, yachtsman and radio manufacturer, unearthed the skeleton after days of labor, aided by a crew of excavators.

That the Indian was of an era of civilization unknown to the white man is the belief of Dr. Fox and Dr. Alvin Laforge, Chicago.

The absence of the glass beads, of silver ornaments, cloth, iron implements and other trinkets common to the graves of Indians, known to have been friendly with white traders and trappers, is considered further proof the Indian unearthed by this expedition was of an age long before this land was trod by white persons and other Indian nations.

The Indian had been honored, the archeologists believe, by his bear tooth necklace, indicating his fearlessness of savage animals. A shell necklace, a group of weapon of chertz, and a stone head completed the articles found, which were not too badly decayed to be identified.

New Coats Slenderize

No "Bulkiness" in this August Sale Group

$55

Fashion demands subtlety and elegance. The vogue is a slim line bounded in fur and flare—and cloth coats for women and misses are cut accordingly. They have

1. Moulded-on effects—the fashionable wrap-around skirt is adjustable to the figure—eliminating waist bulkiness and slenderizing everyone.
2. Monotone effects—coats in one color, or two very closely blended ones, emphasize vertical lines—so the illusion of great length and oh! what chic results.

Fashion cuts these coats on soft, suede-like fabrics. She trims them in expensive furs. And she places them (rightfully) in the wardrobe of smart women who know their modes and appreciate what values such coats are at $55. Priced this low August only.

MISS HARD-BOILED

Raquel Helps Trapped Man To Elude Angry Wife

CHAPTER XXXV.

Raquel held her handkerchief against her mouth to still her rising laughter.

She could almost believe it herself—about Uncle Al phoning and going back to the convent. That funny Greta. She made her frightened, her grief so poignant. Uncle Al—

Raquel's mind was short-lived. Suppose the woman in the car there should come to the door demand entrance. She'd find the man hidden in the room. She'd cry perhaps, or make a scene. People would hear. She'd come to find out what happened. Alphonse would be furious. So would Uncle Al. New York and Greta—all unraveled to do.

"I must find a way to get the man out," Raquel decided. She did not want Greta to be sent back. She liked the unfortunate Irish girl, with a quick sympathy that showed in her overflowed eyes.

"Greta," she said tensely, but in a tone that could not be heard outside the room. "He must leave the room—this man. At once."

"Can't do it, lady," came a determined voice through the darkness. "Not while my wife's out there."

"You never told me you had a wife—" Greta sobbed. "Uncle Al will never give me a car—"

"If you don't stop that, I'll see you don't lose anything by this—mess," wheedled the voice.

Raquel's Plan

"Hush." Raquel thought she heard a rustling outside the door. No, it must have been imagination.

"Where are you, Greta?" she asked softly.

"Here," sniffing.

Raquel waved in the direction of the sniffle.

"Listen, sister's now," she said. "I will go to the door, open it and then stop."

"No no no," expostulated the man in the dark.

"Be quiet," Raquel said. "You act the fool. If you want to get out of the room without having the whole ship know of—of—this—you must do as I say."

"Uncle Al promised me a car," whimpered Greta.

"Stop, now," Raquel ordered. She was losing patience. If she could shake that mischievous monkey of a Greta. "I will stop in the door and say, loud enough for the woman to hear, 'Hurry, dear.' He said he would meet us on the top deck, near the front." Greta, you are to answer, 'I'll hurry.' Then I'll close the door and go, swiftly, to the top deck. The woman will follow."

"Yes, but suppose she doesn't follow?" groaned the voice.

"She will follow. Greta, in a few minutes after I have gone you are to hurry out of the door. If the woman is still there go right on and meet me on the top deck. If she is gone, come back and tell your friend so that he may go quickly. You understand?"

Strategy Successful

"Oh, Cousin Raquel, how can I ever thank you?"

"Never mind thanking me now. Wait until it is safely finished. You are sure you understand?"

"Y-e-s," Sniff. Sniff.

Raquel found the door opened it wide. She had hit upon an opportune moment. The woman was passing. She called back gaily the line she had promised. Greta answered. Raquel closed the door and scudded up the corridor. As she turned a corner, she could see that the woman was following.

Raquel continued until she reached the upper deck. The woman was close behind her. Lurking in the shadows. Over there by the rail.

Minutes passed. Or were they hours? Here was Greta at last.

"Hasn't Tom shown up yet?" she complained shrilly.

Raquel could have staked her life on one thing. The name of the man in the dark was not Tom.

No, he hadn't. She held perplexed. He'd always said—

Maybe he said the wrong—

He might have—

Let's go down and see—

No, we'll—more than likely a—[illegible] double-cross for us.

The woman did not move out of the shadows. Either she had given up the chase of the handsome Tom, Raquel knew her.

Which they were safe against the room. Greta said fearfully.

I—bet you're mad as a hatter.

Raquel shook her head, managed a smile.

No, she said, but it was pushing the edge of the fire wasn't it.

Raquel Disapproves

Gosh, I'll say it was. When you suggested that trick I didn't think it would go so well."

But Greta—if the woman had come in here—if Monsieur Alphonse heard—he would send you back as he said."

Sure he would. And that's the last thing I want to happen. The digging ought to be great in Paris now. But this bimbo was such a nice fat prospect I couldn't help giving him a ring. Honest, I couldn't."

"You see, though, you've taken the chance for nothing—"

For nothing?" Greta's blue eyes were merry now. For pearls, dearie, you don't know the half of it. Wait until I check up on that bimbo tomorrow—

But—"

"But my eye! He's so glad he got away without any bones broken, he'll want to give me his name signed to a blank check. I tell you, old dear, that little playmate has dough. You didn't think I was crying about my automobile for nothing, did you?"

Raquel gave it up. There was no use trying to reason with this naughty Greta.

"Just the same," she said, helping herself to one of the plumpest of the hot-house grapes from the gondola basket and holding it between her gleaming blue-white teeth, "I believe you are playing for very small stakes."

Greta plopped into a chair as if she had been pushed into it. "Look who's talking," she gasped. "Small stakes? Automobiles? What would you advise me to dig for, dearie—the Woolworth Building?"

Discuss Love

Raquel laughed.

"I don't know your Woolworth Building," she said. "But if it is very nice, and permanent, it should be worth having."

"I see," Greta was thoughtful. "You want to get yours in a lump sum. Seize the ship, anchor and all. Well, maybe you're right. Only look at the fun you're missing."

Raquel went on nibbling grapes.

"Say, dearie, you're not pulling any of this love stuff on me, are you? All for honey, and get a sock in the eye? Honest, I couldn't bear that."

Raquel pushed away the fruit. "I don't believe in love," she said shortly.

"Now you're talking. Somebody sure played a joke when they invented the old lovey-dovey. Love!" Greta emitted a peal of raucous laughter. "I'll bet that loving mamma is still waiting up there on the top deck for her hot papa."

"Yes," said Raquel. Her voice was like cracked ice.

Men! Bandits. Plunderers. She hoped Greta would get her automobile.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Casserole

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. In using a casserole is the casserole placed on the table and passed, as one does the other dishes, or does the hostess serve from it, although other dishes are being passed?

2. In introducing her daughter, what form should the mother use? MARGY.

1. I strongly recommend that the hostess have the casserole placed in front of her, and that she serve from it. This mode of serving makes it much easier for the hostess, and certainly much less awkward for the guests. Even the smallest casseroles are rather heavy to pass.

2. In introducing one's relatives less formality is observed than in other introductions. A mother can say: "This is my daughter Lillian. Mrs. Underwood," or "Mr. Brown, have you met my daughter?" If the daughter is married the mother would say: "My daughter, Mrs. White."

Correct Phraseology

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please let me know which is correct—"You and I" or "You and me?"

E. J. S.

That depends on how you use this in your sentence. For instance, if they are the objects of a verb or of a preposition you use "you and me." As in: "She is going to invite you and me. And (for the object of the preposition), She told it to you and me. You can always test this by leaving out the "you"—"She is going to invite me," or "She told it to me." You see that you would not say "She is going to invite I" or "She told it to I."

But you use "you and I" if these are the subjects of the verb. "You and I promised her that we would come to her party."

Henpecked Husband's Woes Are Mostly Counterfeit, Insists Fay King

YES, DEAR!
SHE NEVER NAGS BUT HE SAYS SHE DOES
HAVE A HEART, HONEY. WHAT ON EARTH HAVE I DONE? THERE'S NO UNDERSTANDING WOMAN!
YOU FLIRTED AND YOU KNOW IT!
IF HIS WIFE IS A TORNADO, SHE WILL WANT THE WORLD TO THINK SHE IS A SWEET ZEPHYR.
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Few husbands, if any, are henpecked.

A lot of that "my wife won't let me" and "I'll have to ask my wife" stuff is just a safety stall.

Least of all henpecked husbands are those who go about complaining that their wives nag.

It is more apt to be true of the husbands who praise their wives too much.

The less said about happiness the more genuine it is.

Those lines about men not understanding women and women being an eternal mystery have long been man's best alibi to do as he pleases and get away with it.

He knows perfectly well what he has done that has displeased his wife. But pleading ignorance and perplexity is always the easiest way out!

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE CARRISON

Outside the City Harry Puts His Plan Into Operation

"You know that I'm with you," I said in answer to the query with which Harry Underwood ended his comment upon the private detective who had trailed us from the farm.

At a girl—" he said warmly. "Now I'll take care of Lil and you give Mary the low-down on what we want."

He escorted his wife into the elevator and as my foot was on the door-sill I drew back.

"Please," I said, "I won't be a minute but I simply must look inside our apartment for a key I need for a trunk out at the farm. I know just where it is so I won't keep you. Go on down. Mary and I will get the next elevator."

My husband's niece had walked with purely punctilious courtesy for me to precede her into the elevator. As the car started downward, I seized her arm and drew her into a recess of the hall.

"That was what Mr. Underwood would call a colossal bluff, Mary," I said. "Here's what we really want."

"I thought something was up," she said. "Go ahead, ladie the well-known beans."

"I can't explain why now, Mary," I said. "Later, if I may, I'll tell you the reason for it all, but Mr. Underwood wants you to sit with Mrs. Underwood for awhile, and keep her so occupied that she won't have a chance to look much at me."

"And you'll be sitting up in front with her husband," Mary drawled with a gamin-like grin. "I don't know whether I ought to fall for this or not, Aunt Madge."

"I'm sorry for your scruples," I laughed back, "but I'm afraid you'll have to swallow them this time. I hear the elevator coming. Now remember ask me if you may sit in the back for awhile. Mrs. Underwood may think you a bit impertinent but I'll make it right with her later, and just now it is imperative she shouldn't suspect something her husband is trying to keep from her."

"Just watch me," Mary promised, as the elevator came to a stop at our floor. "You'll be rewarded, also surprised."

She kept her word. No spoiled child could have equaled the tired whine with which she asked if she might not change places with me for awhile, saying that her back ached from sitting erect in the front seat.

"If I can just sprawl out a bit in the back, I'll be all right," she said. "Then when I'm rested I can come in front again. I hope you don't mind the change, Auntie Madge?"

"Not a bit," I agreed promptly. "In fact, I like to ride in the front occasionally."

Of course, after that there was nothing left for Lillian but to give a cordial assent to Mary's next query, patently perfunctory as to her approval of the change. And so we started, I watching in the mirror the actions of the private detective in the black coupe opposite us who was also making preparations to get his car away from the line of vehicles at the curb.

My task was a light one, for the man dogged us persistently and Mr. Underwood made no attempt to shake him off. Instead on several occasions I noticed him deliberately making an opportunity for the man to catch up to us when other cars had come in between us.

"I want him to think he has us sewed up," Harry murmured once, and my excitement mounted as I realized that he must have some carefully mapped out scheme in his head for throwing the pursuer off.

That the scheme involved a deliberate misleading as to our road, I saw at once when Mr. Underwood instead of following our street westward to Eleventh avenue, connecting with Riverside, and then on up to Kingston, turned east to Fifth avenue and then up that thoroughfare.

"Is this the shortest way, dear?" Lillian asked surprised.

"No," her husband returned, "but it will get us there in less time. Yonkers is terribly congested. I'm going around by White Plains."

But to the man following us it must have appeared that we were headed for New Haven or Boston. Up Fifth avenue, through the wonderful one-way east drive of Central Park, then on to the Boston Post road we traveled. Mr. Underwood making surprisingly good time with the big car and the black coupe trailing close behind us. And then I saw Harry's eyes watching a police booth ahead and he slowed down a trifle, not turning directly toward the occupant of it but sending an oblique glance at the officer who advanced to the side of the road as we went by.

Now," I heard him breathe to himself, and then he spoke aloud to me.

Watch that cop, Madge. He's the last one for quite a spell. As soon as he can't see us, I'm going to let her out. Tell me when."

But before I could obey him I saw the officer step into the road and hold up his hand to halt the black coupe trailing us.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, August 26

A day of conflicting interests and events is foreshown by the opposing forces strong among the leading planets. Although employment and new undertakings are under favorable sway, yet there may be stubborn obstacles to encounter with delays, disappointments, and also malignant conflict and opposition. Cool demeanor and positive self-restraint, with every precaution in making agreements, may swerve the affairs into prosperous and safe channels. A personal enmity is seen.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which much depends upon personal discretion and self-control.

A child born on this day may have much to overcome in its own disposition in the way of self-government and development before he succeeds in those places where his definite talents and qualities would be prized. He may be clever and versatile, but stubborn, impulsive and quarrelsome.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

No Cure for Stepping Husbands

How to "cure" a stepping husband. That is what a young wife wants me to tell her, and what about a million wives, young and old, would give their last penny to find out.

If I knew an infallible recipe for retrieving wandering husbands, dear heart, I could sell it for enough money to keep me in diamond wrist-watches and Rolls-Royces for the rest of my life.

There are just three kinds of stepping husbands.

First, those who are BORN that way. Those who were born instinctive rovers, just as some children are born with double-jointed or red hair or big ears. They would never stay at home, if their homes were Paradise and their wives archangels. They step, not for love of another woman, but just for love of a change, or love of adventure, or love of amusement, or love of conquest. Their hearts may belong to their wives, but they were born with a going-foot and a wandering fancy. Thank heaven, their kind is almost as rare as club feet or Siamese twins.

Second, there are those who leave home just because they want to GET AWAY. Because their homes have become unbearable or because they have lost their taste for their wives. Because they are bored or annoyed or nagged and ANY place looks better to them than the old fireside. If all the speakeasies and pool-rooms were closed they would go to a graveyard for relief.

* * *

Third, there are those who step out because they are in love—or imagine themselves in love—with another woman.

And what can you do to "CURE" any of these?

The natural-born stepper can no more be cured of his weakness than a cat can be cured of its appetite for cream. Not even old age and rheumatism can stop him from limping off after every pretty face, and only when he lies in his coffin with his eyes closed, will he fail to answer the signal in another woman's eyes.

The man who hates his home and is tired of his wife can only be kept in the house evenings by nailing him to the floor or strapping him to the armchair. And, then, his material presence is not much consolation, when you are aware that his astral body is a mile away, at the club or the lodge with "the boys," making whoopee.

The man who is in love with another woman is hopeless, as long as he THINKS that he is "in love." Only time and the OTHER woman can cure him. If he stops stepping and returns to his wife, it is because of the other woman's bad playing or because he has wearied of her and waked up from his dream. All that his wife can do is to keep the home-fires burning, close her eyes, hold her peace—and WAIT.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Don't Expect Love to Work a Miracle, or Marriage, Either!

Will love "Cure all that?"

Henri thinks it will. Henri loves a lady. She's all that Henri isn't. He's methodical—she's all mishmash. He's quiet—she's fulla fizz. He wants to boss—she likes to butt in. Yet Henri, in his optimism, thinks love will work a miracle . . . change a Jumping Bean to a Jenny Wren! And he wants us to tell him he's right. Fat chance!

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I certainly admire the advice you give to the people who write to you. And that's why I'm coming to you with my question.

"I am a young man of 26, holding a professional position with a satisfactory income. Ten months ago, I became engaged to a girl of 24. A college graduate. She is very beautiful. In fact, sometimes I think she is too beautiful for me. She is socially active, and that is one reason I fell in love with her. She seemed so congenial entertaining and sweet, not to mention that she admires art and music, which is my profession.

"Our love for each other grew greater and greater, and we were engaged when we had only known each other for less than two months. Everything was 'seventh heaven' to me, and we decided to have an early marriage and get settled down.

"But strange as it may seem, things have come up that bother me. I have found out that there are many things she does that conflict with my ideas of living. From time to time I have noticed that she is very talkative and temperamental. She will do all the talking whenever we attend a party or are in the presence of other people, even strangers. Instead of giving me a chance to talk, she does it, and then she says I am not sociable enough, when I try to tell her to be quiet once in a while. That people will like her better if she is.

"Sometimes she uses a lot of unnecessary jokes and slang, and teases people so roughly that I am afraid it make a bad impression and it embarrasses me. She likes to criticize other people, but she feels dreadfully offended if you criticize her. She always thinks she's right and you're wrong.

"Also, I've found she is often very careless about her clothes. It makes no difference to her whether her dress looks attractive neat and becoming, or not. And it makes me feel bad to see her look so shabby at times. She has no taste in clothes, and as long as they're the right size she'll wear them, no matter how they look.

"Sometimes she'll even leave her hair uncombed and insist it makes no difference because we're just staying home and it isn't necessary. I try to tell her how it affects me but she won't listen.

"Also, when I have business transactions with outsiders, she keeps butting in and trying to tell me what to do, and this makes me angry.

"In spite of all this, she has the most wonderful love for me. She is very thoughtful and lovable when we are alone. Also she is economical, and always advises me to cut down expenses, and I love her for that. And she says she will do her very best to make me happy. And for this I love her, in spite of all her ways that kill my love sometimes.

"Now we are expecting to be married in a few weeks. Every preparation for the wedding is under way. And if it weren't for these things I've mentioned, I would be very happy. Do you think her love is really sincere? I know that if it is, it will change her in time. Love does change people, doesn't it?

"Now what I want to know is, how can I change her now? I want to start our marriage right. I want it to be a success. Please help me, and tell me what to do and how I can convince her, as I love her, so!

"HENRI."

Will love change her?

Answer it yourself, Big Boy. Has it changed you? Has it made you want to giggle and gab and toss your things about? No it hasn't. You're the same solid bunch of hardware that you were before you met this dame. And if you live with her 100 years, you'll still be as tight and tidy as a new faucet. And she'll still be full of fizz and flop. Only instead of being "in love," you'll hate each other like poison.

For love doesn't change us, Henri—not the real us. It may change certain of our surface mannerisms—but it can't alter the contours of our souls. And, in your case, why should it? You're all right—for the kind of person who likes that sort of thing. And she's all right for those who want 'em that way. You're both Okay—as separate individuals. For you haven't a thing in common save a temporary temperature that you call Love.

It isn't love. Love is based on a true companionship—a true natural community of interests. Which is actually the last thing you want to get. For while you're very keen on your own interests, son, it's plain that you think hers are a flop. So if you don't want to pick yourself gobs of grief, break while the breaking is good.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Disease Is Mostly Due to the Way We Live

Many of the diseases of today are the outcome of artificial ways of living. What are known as the "deficiency diseases" attack grown-ups as well as our growing children. Babies are not exempt from them. One of the most common of such ailments is rickets.

DR COPELAND

This disease appears between the sixth and the eighteenth month. It is unusual in an infant younger than this, and rarely seen in a child older than three years.

It has been said that fully one-half of the infant population of our large cities have rickets to a greater or less degree. Too many children in the cities are deprived of sunshine and fresh air, and too many lack proper nourishment.

With the great advance in the number having this disease, much experimentation has gone on within the past 10 years to find out its causes. It comes primarily from lack of nourishing food. It can be cured by following the proper diet on the one hand, or it can be cured by exposure to sunlight.

Rickets is not confined to one part of the body, but it involves all the tissues. Its most striking symptom is the abnormal condition of the bones. A child who has rickets is usually anemic and is very nervous and irritable. He does not walk early because the muscles and bones are weak, and the ligaments lax. He may be bow-legged or knock-kneed. Enlargement of the bones at the wrist and ankle takes place. Some deformity of the chest, such as pigeon breast and bony protuberances of the skull may be present.

McCollum and his co-workers found in cod liver oil the factor known as Vitamin D, which prevents rickets. Lack of this vitamin permits of the development of rickets.

The effects of sunlight are being studied now as never before. We know that sunlight exerts a profound effect on the welfare of the body.

There is no doubt that the prevalence of rickets in America and in middle Europe is largely due to lack of sunlight. Negro and Italian children of our American cities are especially liable to contract this disease because their skin pigmentation prevents the ultra violet rays from penetrating actively.

Because of muscular weakness in this disease the abdominal walls give way, and we see the "pot-bellied" child. Flat-foot is another effect of rickets. The child eats and sleeps poorly and as a consequence he is irritable and nervous.

When a child is found to have any of the symptoms of rickets, the diet must be changed. The largest number of cases of rickets are found among the artificially fed babies. Few cases occur among breast-fed infants. Cod liver oil is of great value and should be given regularly. An abundance of milk is needed to provide the lime required in building bone tissues. Orange juice, tomato juice and prune juice may be given. For the older children all these, with spinach, cabbage and eggs, should be provided.

Exposure to the direct rays of the sun is essential when sunlight is to be had. All the hospitals and clinics now furnish artifical lights which have the same effect. By proper feeding and exposure to sunlight your child may be safe from this disease. The disease is now well understood and by careful attention rickets can be helped and cured in time.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Nobody comes forward with coiffure designs for long hair. The Godiva girls resort to ear buns or place the long tails in a wad behind the left ear. Tight braids, arranged coronet fashion around the head, are seen now and then.

It is no good trying to fight freckles if one is to enjoy outdoor life. The time to battle them is after the silly season is over, when the complexion is no longer subjected to exposure of the elements. Then lemon juice can be used, or peroxide and rosewater in equal parts. Strong bleaches that produce dermatitis should be avoided. If you use them you may lose your freckles, but you may also lose your complexion.

Have you fingertips that are too plump? Buy yourself a dozen small clothespins, such as can be found in the toy department. Put them on the fingers and thumbs at night when going to bed. It is unbelievable, but the pressure does do away with fingertip spread.

Strong sunlight brings pep to the human system, but it takes the life out of the complexion, as the suntan fiends found to their despair last summer. Continued tanning coarsens the texture of the skin. As the epidermis becomes thicker, there is less chance of the capillaries throwing their rose hues to the surface, providing the cutaneous substance with delicate coloring.

TRACK-FIELD PROGRESS IN 36 YEARS

IN VIEW OF George Simpson's new American sprint record of 21.3 seconds for 220 yards on a track with a turn, Paul Jessup's new world discus mark of 169 feet 8⅞ inches, Herman Brix's new national shot put record of 52 feet 5¾ inches, and the brilliant performances of other stars in the A. A. U. national championship meet at the Stadium, some figures that have come to hand relative to competition of the kind in this district almost four decades ago are interesting as showing the great advance made in track and field sports. The statistics are taken from old copies of "LaVie," the Pennsylvania State College year book, giving the best Penn State marks for the various track and field events up to 1894, and covering the results of the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Association's meets of 1893 and 1894.

George Simpson

In the light of present-day records, these figures may not denote any startling achievements, but they were extraordinarily good for 36 years ago. Look them over:

	Pennsylvania Intercollegiate May 13, 1894	Pennsylvania Intercollegiate June 12, 1893	Best Penn State Marks Up to 1894
100-yard dash	10 1-5	10 2-5	10 4-5
220-yard dash	25 1-5	23 3-5
440-yard dash	54 1-5	52 4-5	57
Half-mile run	2:09 4-5	2:03 4-5	2:13
Mile run	4:51 1-5	4:38	5:28
High jump	5 ft. 1¾ in.	6 ft. 1¼ in.	5 ft. 6 in.
Broad jump	17 ft. 7 in.	20 ft. 4 in.	20 ft. 4½ in.
Pole vault	8 ft. 10 in.	10 ft. 2 in.	9 ft. 6 in.
Shot put	35 ft. 7 in.	37 ft. 5 in.	38 ft. 6 in.
Hammer throw	116 ft. 7 8 in.	93 ft. 11 in.	94 ft. 9 in.

THE RECORD OF the 1894 meet also lists a mile walk won in 8 minutes 51 1-5 seconds, and a two-mile bicycle race won in 5 minutes 31 2-5 seconds. The scoring in the 1894 meet was as follows: Swarthmore 66⅔ points, Penn State 29, W. U. P. (now Pitt), 8⅓, Lehigh, 6, Lafayette, 0. Penn, a member in 1893 had withdrawn.

The mile run in that meet was won by A. A. Marshall, of W. U. P., and the high jump winner was E. P. Harder, of Penn State. Those were the only first places taken by those two institutions. In the 1893 meet, the 100 yard and 220-yard dashes were won by Gardner Steele, of W. U. P., the only firsts that came to the local school.

THE RETROGRESSION in the marks from the 1893 level is accounted for by Penn's withdrawal. Most of the 1893 events had been won by Penn men. Only the 100-yard dash and the hammer throw were bettered in the following year.

In another year W. U. P. scored 22 points and State 21, finishing second and third behind Swarthmore, which indicates that the rivalry was keen even that far back. The fact that some of the best Penn State marks were better than the association records was due to the fact that they were made at various times, some of them in 1892, and not always in actual competition.

Herman Brix

Though the Pirates will be on the road until Thursday, fans of the Pittsburgh district will not be left without a chance to see some high-class baseball in the meantime, as President Barney Dreyfuss has loaned the home lot of the Buccaneers to the Union Printers' International Baseball League for the playing of games in its annual championship tournament. The teams in this league include some of the best players in the country outside of organized ball, the clubs are well matched, the rivalry is keen and each year the tournament is productive of sharp competition and brilliantly played games. This year is the twentieth in which the Union Printers' League has staged its tournament, and it is the first time since 1913 that Pittsburgh has been the scene of the contests.

IN THE PRESENT tournament, 11 cities are represented by strong teams. They are Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, St. Paul, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh. Double-headers will be played each day and the public is invited to attend the games. Two defeats are required to eliminate a team.

To the winning team each year goes the handsome Garry Herrmann trophy, presented by the former head of the National Commission and ex-president of the Cincinnati Reds, himself at one time a printer. After Wednesday, on account of the return of the Pirates, the printers will play their games at Kennywood Park.

WASHINGTON HAS DOMINATED the competition in recent seasons, the entry from the national capital having won the championship and the trophy the last two years and in seven of the last eight years. Washington has been the winner eight times all told, Boston four times, Chicago three times, New York twice and St. Louis and St. Paul once each.

Jess Petty

Though Pittsburgh has never succeeded in taking the honors, the local boys have always made a very creditable showing and once got as far as the finals. This year they have a strong team that gives promise of making a determined bid for the title. In addition to the baseball battles, the printers will engage in a four-day golf tourney at the Alcoma Country Club. Entertainment features during the days and evenings also have been arranged for the visitors to Pittsburgh.

IT'S TO THE club that is best in the pinches that pennants generally go, and the Cubs must be said to have made their chances look more promising than ever by turning back both rival contenders in two important series on which first place was at stake. First they took three out of four games with the Robins and now they have made the same record against the Giants. The Dodgers, it is true, had been losing to the Bruins all season, and were in their worst slump of the year into the bargain when they played in Chicago recently, but the McGrawites were in top form when they opened their four-game series with the McCarthy's last Thursday, were fighting for the top and had held an edge on Chicago in previous meetings.

IT TOOK THE playing ability and all the other qualities of a real champion club to come back and knock off the Giants for three in a row after they had won the first game of the series and defeated the Cubs 10 times in 16 tilts. Even with a lead of five full games, the Bruins may still have a hard fight ahead, as their schedule is much tougher than that of the Giants, but they have made it evident that it will be a huge contract for New York or any other club to beat them out.

Whether Manager McCarthy has further helped the chances of the Cubs by bringing another veteran back from the minors remains to be seen. George Kelly is aiding them not a little, but in all probability if Jess Petty, former Pirate pitcher just bought from Newark, is to do the same, he will have to show a whole lot more than he did for the Bucs this year. He won eight games for Newark against five defeats, and if this means an improved stride he ought to be serviceable to the Cubs, as with only Bob Teachout available, the Bruins needed an experienced southpaw.

WHILE THEY LOST ground in the fight for fourth place through

MICHIGAN NINE SCORES FIVE IN FIRST

By TOM BIRKS

The Detroit printers got away to a running start in the opening battle of the National Printers' baseball tournament at Forbes Field this afternoon, the Michigan nine scoring five runs in the first inning of its game with Indianapolis.

Due to a misunderstanding the contest did not start until after 1 o'clock. The original schedule called for the contest to start at 10:30 a. m.

While Indianapolis was battling Detroit at Forbes Field, the Pittsburgh team was clashing with New York at the Frick playgrounds, while St. Louis was opposing Washington at the Magee playgrounds. At 3 o'clock, Boston opposes St. Paul at Forbes Field.

The Indianapolis battery was Ergut and Petty, while Numbers and Buchta formed the Detroit battery.

President John M. Dugan, of Cincinnati, and his party arrived last night to take charge of the tourney and conduct the draw. Washington is the defending champion. It would appear the Senators in the past have had matters pretty much their own way, winning the Garry Herrmann trophy seven times in the last eight years, and eight times all told.

Chicago broke the streak in 1927, but 1928 and 1929 found the Senators back to their winning ways.

GOLF TOMORROW

Tomorrow morning the golfing element of the Printers body will be early in the morning to Alcoma Country Club to start 72-hole medal play golf championship. Play will continue Wednesday and Thursday, with the last 18 holes scheduled Friday.

Last evening there was a reception and dance in the Venetian Room at Webster Hall, President Dugan, Vice President Joe Dallas, of Boston, and Secretary Ed Springelmeyer, of St. Louis, and the National Commission, composed of William McCann, Pittsburgh; Henry Whitcomb, Boston; Fred A. Lang, Chicago; Ed Sauer, Cincinnati; Joe Williams, Cleveland; Joseph Francis, New York; R. D. Geary, St. Louis; George Longergan, St. Paul, and Edgar Brown, of Washington, attending.

This morning a sight-seeing trip around Pittsburgh was provided, and the visiting typos and their ladies got a glimpse of Pittsburgh's wonders, industrially and scenically.

Commissioner McCann and his large committee feels nothing has been spared in the matter of entertainment, and a royal week is ahead of the typos.

It has all the attributes of a "Mystery Thriller." There are in it, walled up entrances, closet doors opening upon blank walls, trapdoors and weird stairways leading nowhere. Also, elaborate gold and silver fixtures and stained windows costing about $5,000 each. Its builder, a woman of unlimited means, believing that she would live as long as she kept adding rooms to the house kept carpenters busy for thirty-eight years. PIRATES PLAY EXHIBITION

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 25.—On top of their interesting 50-50 party in Cincinnati yesterday, the Pirates are being entertained by this Three I League town today. Terre Haute is the home of Max Carey, coach of the Buccos, and it is probable that Scoops will play a part of the exhibition game scheduled between the Freebooters and the locals.

Late tonight the Pirates will entrain for Chicago, where tomorrow they will open a two-day battle with the pace-setting Cubs.

TEAM SPLITS UP

The Pirate entourage left Cincinnati this morning in two sections. One crew, consisting of the regular pitchers and catchers and one or two others went direct to Chicago to be ready for tomorrow, the main body of the club diverting to Terre Haute.

The Pirates today were not altogether satisfied with the square deal affair at Cincy yesterday. Remy Kremer recorded his eighteenth victory of the season as the Buccos copped the early contest, 9 to 6, but there were a lot of regrets and irony connected with Steve Swetonic's hard defeat. Ray Kolp blanked the Buccos in this contest, 2 to 0, his victory checking the drive of the Buccos which had mounted to seven straight successes.

The magnificent slab duel staged by Swetonic and Kolp ended with Redland fans in terror. The Pirates struck back fiercely in the ninth, but two fast plays turned them back just when they seemed ready to force a deadlock.

RETIRES 20 IN ROW

Swetonic gave one of the greatest slab performances seen in the National League this year as he retired the first 20 Reds that faced him. In other words he had only

I thought the Giants might get somewhere in the crucial series, but those Cubs fought like the Rocky Mountains were their home grounds.

But the sensation of the Western tour was the Brooklyn team. As a rail-trip, it was just a brass pole to the Robins. When they blew, they made it a hurricane. I told you the Robins would finally run out of cocaine.

Generals Hand Charleroi Drubbing

Clarksburg handed Charleroi a real drubbing in their Middle Atlantic League battle yesterday, the Generals coming through with a 12-0 victory over the Governors.

Cumberland tripped Scottdale, 7-4, in their battle, while Wheeling nosed out Fairmont, 2-1, in a night game.

CLARKSON SETS RECORD

BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—C. B. Clarkson, Chicago, set a new national record in the accuracy bait casting contest, distances unnamed, at the closing day's tournament of the National Association of Scientific Clubs here yesterday. Clarkson had only one miss in 10 tries, his mark of 99 being one point better than the old National record, held jointly by four casters.

DAVIES-ANSLEM FIGHT TONIGHT

By JAMES MILLER.

Should Wee Willie Davies, one of the cleverest of the little fellows, win from Frankie (Kid) Anslem, Negro flyweight, of Philadelphia, in their main bout of the double windup at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tonight, it will be his second victory in six days. Last Tuesday night, Willie defeated Frisco Grande, of Buffalo, at Johnstown.

Anslem comes here with a record crammed full of leading flyweights and bantamweights he has fought, and if he lives up to past performances, he will give Davies a tough evening. But the local fans who watched Willie defeat Corp. Izzy Schwartz, and almost knock him out in the last round, Frankie Genaro, N. B. A. champ, and Black Bill twice, are ever-willing to stake the wad that Davies will box his way to the decision over Anslem.

WINDMILL BOUT

The other half of the double bill finds Battling Gizzy, of the White-Witz stable, meeting Georgie Balduc, of Canada. This is another match that will keep the fans interested, for both fighters are of the windmill variety, who throw punches from the bleachers and still hit the mark.

Len (Swede) Johnson, light-heavyweight, of New York, a newcomer to these parts, is in the eight-round number against Arvin Spence, of Cleveland. Jimmy Thomas, of the Hill, and Young Nanci, of Swissvale, are scheduled for the second six-round bout, with Joe Gaudy, of McKeesport, mixing with Eddie Hebner, of Clairton, in the opening setto of six rounds. Count up the rounds, folks. There are 40 of them. The cash customers are sure in for a big night.

The Los Angeles A. C. added the senior A. A. U. title to the West Coast's list on Saturday, which already included the junior championship, won on Friday by

Babe Ruth Explains How to Play First

JOE BABE
FIRST BASEMAN PLAYING IN FOR POSSIBLE SACRIFICE WITH A RUNNER ON FIRST NOTICE HOW JUST A STEP OR TWO BACK AND WELL TO R IN CASE OF BUNT DOWN FIRST BASE LINE AS IS READY TO PounCE ON BALL AND WITH A SINGLE MOTION THROW EITHER TO SECOND OR FIRST

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

Most of the fans seem to think all a first baseman has to do is catch a few throws, touch the bag up a ground ball now and then, and always be sure his foot is on the bag. I'm afraid some big leaguers have that idea, too.

"I'm a hear cat at that first bag," Joe told me. "A fellow don't have to do anything there."

I scuffled and he turned up a bit.

"Well, what is there tough about a first baseman's job?" he asked.

"Knowing where to play and when to play there," I told him. Then I explained to him what I thought was the toughest job a first baseman has and that's playing in for a possible sacrifice with a runner on first, so he's in position to keep the runner from stealing and at the same time is ready to grab the bunt and get a force play at second if possible.

CAN COVER BUNT

The picture illustrates what I mean. Notice that I have Joe [illegible] a ground ball and [illegible] First, when the pitcher covers the bag. Making that throw is difficult and even in the big leagues there are some first basemen who can't make the play. On that play a good rule is always toss the ball underhand and without any wrist snap. Aim at the bag and time your throw to reach the bag so the pitcher can take the ball as his foot hits the sack.

A first baseman must work in perfect understanding with both the pitcher and the second baseman, particularly on slow ground balls hit down between first and second. On balls like that the first baseman takes them wherever possible and the pitcher covers first. On slow hit balls down the first base line the first baseman playing in takes the ball and the second baseman covers first.

MUST HANDLE WIDE THROWS

The first test of a good first baseman is his ability to handle wide throws thrown over his head and throws in the dirt. A first baseman who can do this is a great help to his infield—for the infielders have confidence in him and will cut loose with a quick throw.

Here's a thing for a first baseman to remember too. On high pop flys to the left of the pitcher or down the first base line the first baseman should take them whenever possible. He thus saves the catcher and pitcher that extra work, but there's another advantage too. With men on bases the first baseman can take such fly balls and be in a position the minute the catch is made to see the entire infield and make a play at whatever other base a play may be possible.

MANY CENTERS AVAILABLE FOR PITT TEAM

As in the center on the [illegible] Pitt football team. Who are YOU going to pick on your team, which of 11 matches players for [illegible] and position for [illegible] selected by James [illegible] Long, dean of local sports writers, to be published in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph [illegible] the opening of the Pitt season, will call for you a season [illegible] All of the Panther home games.

Of course if your team does not match Long's in every respect you still have a chance to win a prize in this novel and highly enjoyable contest. If pick 10 of the 11 players, you will receive two tickets to the Pitt-Notre Dame game; if you name 9 of the 11 you will get two free tickets to the Pitt-Tech contest; if you pick 8 of the 11 you will receive one seat to the Notre Dame game; pick 7 of the 11 and you get a ticket to either the Tech or the Penn State contests, and if you name six players, you will receive a ticket to the opening game with Waynesburg.

In case of ties, the winners will receive duplicate prizes.

In today's article clues will be dropped as to the selection of the center. Next week the famous guards in Pitt history will be discussed, and the week following the tackles will be taken up. Then will come the ends and finally the backfield men.

BOAST GREAT NAMES

The Panthers have boasted some famous centers during the period between 1890, when Pitt was W. U. P. and the present time. There have been the Cutler Sisters, Peck, Johnston, Hogan, Chamberlain and the Bowser Two of these, Bob Peck and Herb Stein, were all-Americans. Both were great centers, hard-hitting and alert on the defense and steady and reliable as snap-pers-back.

But Herb and Bob were not the only pivot men of whom Pitt may boast. There are fans who will argue that Marsh Johnson and Charley Bowser were as good as they come; in fact will rank them above both Stein and Peck because they could and did play other positions.

Remember the husky center on the undefeated Pitt team of 1927? How about Andy Cutler, who was made over from a backfield man? He was a tower of strength on the Pitt line that protected the great halfback pair, Gib Welch and Jimmy Hagan.

REMEMBER HOSKINS?

Away back in 1896, when it was Western University of Pennsylvania and the games were played at old Exposition Park, Hoskins, a former Blair star, played center for the WUPS and did a good job of it. He also coached the team, which brought protests from some of the WUP rivals. He was a crackerjack player as good in the opinion of many of the old-timers, as any of the later stars.

Chesarown, who followed Hoskins as the WUP center, was another fine player, whose fame has been lost in the duty of antiquity, but who, never the less, covered himself with bruises and glory during the old center-rush days.

And don't overlook, not for an instant, the great Dolly Galvin and Jack Turner. As centers in their time they left little if anything to be desired. Galvin was a pip—ask some of the old timers if he wasn't. Turner, too, was a center to warm the cockles of any coaches' heart. He was an accurate passer and a smart defensive player.

These two men would be able to hold their own with any array of center stars. Don't overlook either of them.

Get into this contest now and have a flock of fun. After the contest is over, Mr. Long will write an article telling why he picked the men he did. No one but Long will know of the makeup of the team until it is published and the prize winners announced.

Follow the weekly articles on the famous stars, which are intended to give you hints as to the composition of the all-time eleven, and then sit down and send in your selection.

JENNINGS WINS PUBLIC PARKS NET TITLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (INS).—For the third consecutive year George Jennings of Chicago yesterday won the men's singles championship of the National Public Parks tennis tournament when he was the victor over Dodd Mitchell of Washington in straight sets 6-4, 7-5, 6-1.

Jennings also repeated his performance of the last two years by winning his third doubles title of public parks competition when he and Jack De Lara of Los Angeles seeded combination No. 1 eliminated Bud Markey of Indianapolis and Eddie Yeomans of Washington in straight sets Saturday.

In the women's doubles and singles, which were played for the first time in the tournament, Mrs. Virginia Dueker of St. Louis was the champion of the latter class while Miss Ethel Haas and Mrs. Lydia Kayser, Buffalo entry, were victorious in doubles competition.

LOCAL NETTERS FACE BUSY WEEK-END

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The present week-end will see extensive tournament action inaugurated for Tri-State racqueteers with competition in the second annual Morgantown Country Club invitation meeting slated to get under way at Morgantown on Friday morning and jousting in the Beaver County championships billed to start on Saturday afternoon at the College Hill Tennis Club in Beaver Falls. Both events are likely to draw heavily from the ranks of the Steel City talent for the Labor Day holiday respite is certain to lure the contestants out in large numbers, all of which means that fast tennis and keen court battles lurk in the offing.

Word from Charley Hodges, genial sponsor of the Morgantown conclave is to the effect that one of the fastest fields in the annals of West Virginia netdom will foregather in the Mountaineer stronghold to fight it out through Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday for the honors annexed a year ago by the redoubtable B. F. Arkie Wheeling and former Pitt freshman ace and Margaret Carspecken Morgantown girl, who Saturday a week ago packed off the Western Maryland women's title by dint of decisive 6-0, 6-3 victory over the noted Mobile contender, Marywill Wakeford.

Arkie it is understood will return to defend his laurels and, though Miss Carspecken will be absent seeking the Middle States women's crown at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, a really powerful coterie of feminine satellites will assemble in quest of the trophy. Tilting is billed in men's and women's singles and doubles and in mixed doubles. Entries are being handled by Charles Hodges in care of the Dominion News, Morgantown, W. Va.

The Beaver County titular milling, which probably will be attended by a score or more of Pittsburgh aspirants as well as by the cream of Beaver Valley racquet performers, is being revived after a season's lapse following Dr. John O'Loughlin's permanent capture of the Ingram Cup in 1928. A handsome new flagon has been procured and beyond doubt or preadventure, the chase for the initial leg upon it will be quite as torrid as ever was any in the palmy days of Jack McLain, Jack Moore, Browne Ransom and the rest of the brilliant crew who made Beaver tennis history in an era gone by.

Men's singles and doubles make up the College Hill program, unless Howdy Campbell can be persuaded at the final moment to break precedent and initiate a women's tourney to advance along with the masculine affair. This, however, is unlikely, for it is the aim of the committee in charge to push the contesting through the quarter-finals in two days of play—Saturday and Monday—with semi-finals billed for later in the week and final tussles on the slate for Saturday, the same afternoon that will see commencement of hostilities in Sam Keller's revival of the Allegheny County championships at the Duquesne Library, Duquesne, Pa. Beaver County entrants will file names with Howard E. Campbell, College Hill, Beaver Falls, Pa. Sam Keller will care for Allegheny County applicants at 559 Sixth avenue, McKeesport.

CHARLES LEADS IN DECATHLON

the Olympic Club of San Francisco and the National intercollegiate laurels held by Southern California's Trojans.

Considering the fact that the Far West has been in the habit of dominating track and field for the past few years, the East and Middle West didn't fare so very poorly in the senior contesting Saturday. True, the coast stars captured 10 of the 20 titles, but the East held its own with the Mid-West which is something for the East to brag about.

COAST COPS HONORS

The Coast carried away the honors in the three-mile with 220, 440 and 120-yard hurdles, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, pole vault, shot, discus and javelin. A former Easterner, Fred Sturdy, of Yale, won the pole vault for the I. A. A. C. but he's wearing that club's colors so naturally the wreath will hang in the trophy room there figuratively if not literally.

To the East went the steeplechase, six-mile run, broad jump (thanks to Al Bates), hammer throw and 56-pound weight.

The Middle West took down both dashes, the mile, high jump and hop, step and jump.

While far larger than on Friday, Saturday's crowd was still very small. If there was 2,000 paid admissions the A. A. U. did very well. Pittsburgh seems able to take its track or leave it, and generally prefers to do the latter. This meet may serve to boost interest, but we won't be able to make a test case now until next year.

STAR TEAM PICKED

A. A. U. officials have named a star team of 66 which will leave tonight for Chicago to compete Wednesday against an all-star array of British stars in an international meet.

PIRATES PLAY EXHIBITION

seven more putouts to record when Denny Southern tried for a shoe-string catch of a Texas Leaguer off the bat of Evar Swanson. The ball got away from Denny and was a scratch double. Two singles followed and the Reds had both of their runs. Cuccinello and Crawford produced the hits. Steve yielded only four safeties in his masterpiece of seven rounds.

Dick Bartell was a big help to Swetonic. The game little shortstop spoiled at least three hits by his marvelous fielding, for which he was cheered to the echo by 10,000 fans.

North Side Steve was struck in the stomach with a fierce drive off Crawford's bat in the fifth. He stayed up long enough to throw out the batter and then doubled up. Inasmuch as he recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, it was feared he was hurt, but he stayed in the game.

One was out in the ninth when Grantham singled to right. Comorosky walloped a long one to center. Swanson sprinted to the path of the ball and flagged it down. It threatened to elude him for three bases, but his fast stop held Commy on first when he might have been on third with the tieing run and one out. Grantham went to third.

The fans stood in the exits as Kolp threw two balls to Traynor. Manager Ens gave Pie the signal to sock one, and Pie did, but his hot smash struck Kolp and dazed him. Traynor headed for first, and Kolp moved to retrieve the ball. Meantime, Grantham tried to score, and Kolp, in his excitement, picked up the ball and stopped Grantham. Bartell flied out, and the game was over.

TOUGH FOR KREMER

Kremer had a tough time winning his game, owing to a mistake of the Pirate infielders. The ball was back on the infield after Swanson had doubled, but the players didn't seem to realize that Benny Frey had tumbled going around third. Traynor threw hurriedly to the plate, the ball struck Frey, and the Reds tied up the game. Frey fought it out with Kremer all the way.

double windup show on tap for the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. arena Friday night, is completed. Flynn having signed Al (Red) Jaderberg, a red-headed Swede who has been in this country only a year, to box Jack Wilson, Jimmy Conrad's North Side middleweight.

Jaderberg during his stay over here has knocked out Joey Sprotta, 3 rounds; Buddy Ryan, 5 rounds; Ted Neil, 2 rounds; Johnny Bowers, 5 rounds, and K. O. Husk. In his last fight at Erie Friday night Jaderberg stopped Mickey Balabon in the first round. Flynn also has Jimmy Belmont signed up for the other 10-rounder and is looking around for an opponent.

Between Rounds

Benny Gersbe, of Cleveland, has been signed as Jackie Rodgers' opponent in the main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, Thursday night.

Eddie Brannon, Negro lightweight, of the Hill, and Billy (Muscle) Scholes, of the North Side, are in the semi-final of eight rounds. Jackie Griffiths, Negro, is paired with Eddie Barr, of the South Side, who is doing a comeback, in the third six-rounder. Mose Butch, Oakland, and Billy Campbell will put on a battle of southpaws in the second six-round bout, with Angelasin Vaquerie, of Panama, mixing with Tony Marino in the opening six-round affair.

Eddie Shea, of Chicago, meets Lew Massey in the main go at the Arena in Philadelphia tonight. Max Baer meets Frankie Campbell, 10 rounds, at San Francisco. Ruby Goldstein boxes Joe Urban, 10 rounds, Dexter Park, New York; Ray Kiser, Oklahoma lightweight, goes against Carlos Garcia, Mexico, 10 rounds, at Tulsa, in other important bouts tonight.

Jack McVey, Negro middleweight of New York, faces Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, in 10 rounds at Los Angeles tomorrow night.

Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., and Fidel LaBarba, of Los Angeles, former flyweight champion of the world and now one of the leading featherweights, box the feature bout of 10 rounds tomorrow night at Cincinnati. George Godfrey, of Louisville, Ky., will answer the gong against Arthur DeKuh, Brooklyn Italian, at the Taylor Bowl, Cleveland, the same night.

Washington Squad Reports Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 24.—Leroy P. (Hank) Day, head coach of athletics at Washington High School, has issued the annual grid call to 35 candidates for the Little President eleven, and will begin training for a hectic season Tuesday morning.

The veteran W. P. I. A. L. campaigner faces the task of plugging great gaps left in the ranks of his varsity eleven through graduation. His main problem will be the front wall, as he has a plentiful supply of shifty backs, led by James (Jappy) Reed, who will captain the team this fall.

Coach Day will be assisted by Phil Berry, former Washington and Jefferson College athlete. The Washington High grid schedule follows:

September 30—Waynesburg at Washington.
September 26—Burgettstown at Washington.
October 3—Monongahela at Washington.
October 10—Duquesne at Duquesne.
October 18—Wilkinsburg at Wilkinsburg.
October 25—New Castle at Washington.
November 1—Turtle Creek at Washington.
November 8—Har Brack at Har Brack.
November 27—Jeanette at Jeannette.

SOCCER LOOPS IN CONFABS

With 13 teams represented, the initial meeting of the Panhandle and Keystone Soccer Leagues, held at Bridgeville yesterday, were distinct successes. There is reason to believe that Wednesday night will see the closing of two big soccer organizations.

Represented at the junior session were Heidelberg Juniors, Cloverdale, Castle Shannon Juniors, Bridgemont, Beadling and Bower Hill, and those represented in the senior were Heidelberg, Curry, Bridgeville, Shannon A. A., Cecil and Primrose.

Old timers such as Joe Lunbacher, Tony Fagan, Bill Donnell, Squire John Smith, Smart, and others sat in on the confabs and offered pointers.

It was decided that at Wednesday's meeting, officers would be elected, forfeits placed, rules passed upon, and the delegate to the West Penn Football Association named.

The Pittsburgh Central League will hold its final organization meeting this evening at Honus Wagner's. President Frank Minchcr expects to close the loop with eight clubs, Union Switch and Signal, Pierpoint Motors, Clan Douglas, Mesta Machine, Sons of St. George and Crafton Heights, and two others. The Celtics and Rovers, of Lawrenceville, are expected to be on hand.

The inaugural tilt in the newly-formed Irish League yesterday saw Galway nosing out Mayor, 1-0, at Garfield Park.

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

TERRE HAUTE, Aug. 25.—Well, folks, we're still going great but everybody felt bad because Steve didn't snag that game after pitching like nobody's business for most of the battle.

I don't know whether you know it or not, but Swetonic had pitched 16 shutout innings before Swanson got that lucky double in the seventh that led to his defeat. He had them Reds eating out of his hands, taking them as fast as they came up till there was two down in the seventh.

Steve wasn't helped any by that sock in the stomach. We all thought he was hurt. But he has plenty of stomach, that boy. He was reeling over in pain as he picked up the ball and threw out Crawford before falling over. He looked sick when he came to the bench, but he stayed right in there. I think there's a better spirit on this club than on any team in the league, and that's because we all like Jule. If you can't hustle for him, you ought to hang up the old glove.

Pie is hittin' like a fool. He went 21 games without missin' and then he broke out with four dandies in the first game yesterday.

He was almost in a wreck coming over. The engineer just missed a truck or something. He threw in the air and woke up everybody but the lefthanders.

Jule is afraid to ride in the same car with the lefties. He's got nearly all of us in one car. At that, there's two or three southpaws on the club that are not safe to have around when you're sleepin'.

Well, here's hopin' we make them Bears climb the greasy pole.

Long's Sport Comment

being held to an even break by the Reds while the Cardinals were winning a double-header from the Phillies, the Pirates at that are only three games removed from the first division, and must still be reckoned as having a good chance to get there.

The Enamen won seven games in a row before they were stopped and even then it took shut-out pitching to beat them. If they can keep up their form of the last week they won't be among the second four when the season ends. The pitching in particular has classed with the best in either league. Charley Wood looks like a find and all the others have taken a brace to keep pace with Remy Kremer, whose Sunday victory over the Reds was his eighteenth of the year. In his last two games Steve Swetonic was scored on in only one inning and allowed only two runs, but was unfortunate in getting only an even break.

Betty Nuthall

IN THE WINNING of the women's tennis championship of the United States by Miss Betty Nuthall, of England, who defeated Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, of California, 6-1, 6-4, in the final round, the first time in its history of 43 years that the title has left these shores, Great Britain would appear to have offset partly the snatching of British golf and tennis titles this year by Helen Wills Moody, Bill Tilden and Bobby Jones. However, Miss Nuthall's victory was not of a kind to indicate any retrogression among the women tennis players of America, for the field over which she triumphed could not be called fairly representative of this country with three such stars as Mrs. Moody, Helen Jacobs and Mo[illegible] Bjurstedt Mallory missing. Mrs. Moody, for instance, defeated [illegible] Nuthall in the final for the American title in 1927, defeated [illegible] and last year in the Wightman Cup competition, [illegible] would have done it again at Forest Hills this year if she had competed. So the passing of the title overseas doesn't [illegible] by any means a going-back on the part of America's women players. This country's best players were absent, that's all. At that Miss Nuthall must be given a world of credit for her achievement. She went in and beat the field that she had to beat, and [illegible] that can be expected of any player.

FROSH ENTER W. VA.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—H. A. Stansbury, director of athletics at West Virginia University, today said 21 high and prep school football stars had filed entrance credits at West Virginia University and were expected to be candidates for the Freshman squad this fall.

BOXER DIES

DILLON, Mont., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Seven hours after he was knocked out by Wade O'Leary, of Butte, in a boxing exhibition, Emil Sencio, Filipino bantamweight, died here yesterday without regaining consciousness.

Game Commission Interested in Trials

EBENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 24.—The Pennsylvania Game Commission is officially taking a keen interest in the coon hound trials that are to occupy all day Friday, September 5, at the Cambria County Fair. With the idea of having a permanent record, the commission has detailed Leo Luttringer to make moving pictures of such features of the trials as will show a coon hunt. Luttringer is an expert at making wild game pictures in the open. As most coon hunts take place at night, it is only at such a trial as that to be staged at the big fair that pictures of such a hunt can be obtained.

Some famous coon dogs have been entered, according to W. D. Owens, the well-known hunter and sportsman. They are coming from as far East as Philadelphia and as far West as Ohio. These trials, so far as county fairs are concerned, originated a year ago with the Cambria County Fair, and so popular did they prove, they are already being imitated by other fairs throughout the country.

MISS NUTHALL VICTOR

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

BRITISH TENNIS STAR WINS U.S. TITLE

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 25.—Betty Nuthall, English tennis star, succeeded Helen Wills Moody as the champion woman player of the United States by conquering Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, of Oakland, Cal., in straight sets at Forest Hills yesterday. The scores were 6-1, 6-4.

The first foreigner since Molla Mallory to gain the American honors, Miss Nuthall gave one of the most superb exhibitions of her youthful existence to subdue the clever Westerner.

Mrs. Harper, erratic in the opening set, offered little opposition but in the second chapter her teasing chops and volleys began to find a few of the corners. In the end Miss Nuthall's severer drives settled the question of who would assume Mrs. Moody's undefeated honors of 1929.

HELEN GLAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Advised that Betty Nuthall, young English star, defeated Mrs. Anna Harper to win the women's singles tennis championship of the United States, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody declared, "It's very nice and I'm glad to hear it."

Mrs. Moody expressed regret her fellow townsman, Mrs. Harper, lost, but added Miss Nuthall was undoubtedly the best player in the tournament.

"This will have been the first time the title has gone abroad," Mrs. Moody explained, "but it rather balances things. The United States won both men's and women's titles recently at Wimbledon, you know."

Mrs. Moody said she hoped to recapture the title next year.

corn roast as the principal attractions.

After a successful season in a local amateur league, Manager Skeets Nelligan, of the Pittsburgh Typos, believes that the Steel City aggregation is due to have its name inscribed on the beautiful trophy. The Printers have carried a large roster all season, but will cut it down to 15 players for the tournament.

The baseball elimination is of the round-robin type, and the system of playing requires a team to be beaten twice to be eliminated.

One hundred golfers will chase the elusive pill in quest of the national title at Alcoma and the visiting followers of the royal and ancient game will have a beautiful clubhouse and a delightful course to fight it out. George Underwood, genial professional at Alcoma, is all set to put the tourney over in a big way.

Hammer Retains Tennis Championship

JEANNETTE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Edgar "Tack" Hammer, Westmoreland County tennis champion, successfully defended his crown against Gus Wolfe, of Jeannette, 6-0, 6-1, 3-6 and 6-2 in a thrilling match here yesterday.

Miss Helen Carson, of Greensburg, defeated Mrs. Eva Webb, also of Greensburg, 6-4, 4-6 and 6-3, to retain the women's singles championship of Westmoreland County.

FAIR OPENS

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 25.—(AP.)—Two hundred fifty horses were here today for the Cumberland Fair which opened with Children's Day. Ten thousand youngsters have been issued free tickets. The racing program begins tomorrow.

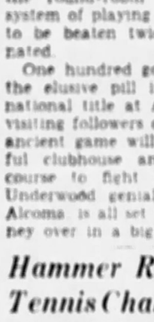
BRITISH-AMERICAN GAMES

The results of the National A. A. U. Games at Pittsburgh, while very impressive in the field events, show that in the running races we are not in as good shape as we might be. The British Empire Games at Hamilton indicated that our English-speaking friends from the British Empire are even stronger in the flat races than we had figured.



Knute Rockne

This new half-miler, Chandler, of South Africa, fills in to make up a two-mile team that should smash all existing records. If America wins any relay race except the high hurdles I shall be surprised.

The British have spent a lot of money getting together all their star athletes from all parts of the world for this meet in Canada. They are determined to come back and take their rightful place in international athletics. They appear to be doing a mighty complete job.

I am going to be a judge of the finish at the meet, which doesn't mean that I will not be enjoying it. It should be the track meet of the year.

MANAGER WILBERT ROBINSON

Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Robins, and Al Lopez, his young catcher, who at the present time is being rated the outstanding receiver in the major leagues. Robbie gives the youngster much credit for the excellent showing of the Robins during the early part of the season, which saw Brooklyn clubb ascend to first place. During the past two weeks the club has slumped and now is resting in third place. Lopez is rated a good handler of pitchers and his work with the stick has left no room for complaint.

WOLF TO DRIVE IN AUTO RACE

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 24.—W. B. (Shorty) Wolf, of Columbus, O., holder of the world record for the century classic on a half-mile dirt track, will be one of the leading speed kings from his home city and state to participate in this city's inaugural 100-mile automobile race at the Fair Grounds Labor Day—Monday, September 1.

Sunny Bill Chittum, the country's acknowledged dirt track champion, and thrice winner of racing frays on the Pittsburgh-Bridgeville board speedway; Clay Corbett, Gene Morgan and Beech Burrell are a quartet of other Columbus speed merchants who will accompany Chittum to this city to battle it out with him and other noted pilots in giving the populace a holiday thrill.

Robert P. Wyke, chairman of the contest board of the American Motor Contest Association, announced the acceptance of the entries of the quintet of Columbus knights of the steel steeds while visiting the local course on an inspection trip today. He declared that a feeling far from friendly exists between these five drivers, and that they alone would offer a bitter fight.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 25.—(AP.)—A hundred campaigners sought the women's western golf title, held by Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, in the week's competition starting today at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Mrs. Hill and Miss Dorothy Page, Madison, Wis., were designated to lead the qualifiers out on the 18-hole test which will determine the 32 to win places in the championship flight.

Among those expected to give Mrs. Hill a battle are Mrs. Gregg Lifur, Los Angeles, runner-up to the defending champion last year at Cleveland; Mrs. G. W. Tyson, Kansas City; Virginia Van Wie and Rena Nelson, Chicago; Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis.; Helen Lawson, Los Angeles, and Mrs. C. C. Cary, Dallas.

alone. The crinkly, goldy hair that escaped from the close black hat was really a light brown, and so were the thick lashes and brows, and the tiny trail of freckles over the bridge of her straight little nose. A cute nose. Gordon Moore decided, and a cute girl. More than that, a deuced attractive girl . . . make a wonderful woman some day.

She was digging in the purse again. Counting her money this time. A few nickels and coppers. Moore's amusement faded. He began to feel vaguely uncomfortable, the unwilling witness to some too realistic drama. Good Lord, the child couldn't be really up against it!

He watched unhappily. Did he imagine it, or was her little face pinched? And the flower blue eyes that he had thought so childish a few minutes ago now seemed old and tired. He didn't like the way she kept staring at Alfred Farnsworth's door. Supplicating. Such a young girl shouldn't need work so badly. Hadn't she any parents? What was the matter with people, sending little girls like that into strange offices? No wonder the papers were full of sordid stories about stenographers and dance hall sheiks and what not. A girl that age ought to be in school . . . damn shame.

Startled
Apology Made When She Is Frightened

He moved his chair so that he wouldn't have to look at her, and the girl jumped violently, and turned to stare at him, her blue eyes wide with startled embarrassment.

Moore colored slightly. Feeling a little foolish he stood up and made a jerky little bow. "I'm sorry that I startled you," he said. "I can see you thought you were alone in here. I should have coughed when you came in!" Back came the crinkly little lines near his eyes, his white teeth flashed in his bronzed face. He was smiling and coming toward her, a hard brown hand out stretched.

Cathie's eyes met the stranger's. Her quick glance took in his perfect clothes, his long, graceful body, his thin, dark face with the aquiline nose and straight black brows. "Somebody awfully important," she decided in a flash. "And good looking. And nice. Oh, isn't he nice!"

"Will you forgive me if I promise to cough next time?" he was saying.

Instantly Cathie's lovely childish face was lit with an answering smile. When she smiled her eyes almost disappeared, and a vagrant dimple trembled at the corner of her mouth. It was a beautiful smile and one that transfigured her completely. It made you think of sunlight, and gallant knights and ladies, and bright mountain flowers. It was so bright, so gay, so touched with poignant beauty.

Acquainted
Pair Introduces Selves To Each Other

"Oh, it's my fault!" she cried quickly, in her clear, sweet voice. "I got to thinking, and I forgot everything. So I was startled when I looked up and—and saw you," she finished a shade less brightly.

It was funny how she changed again, as the smile faded. When she smiled you forgot everything, except that she was a woman, and beautiful. And when the smile went out there she was, just a green girl in makeshift clothes.

She's getting worried about talking to a strange man, Moore decided, watching her first glow of friendliness fade, and her shoulders straighten primly. "Look here, let's introduce ourselves the way they do on shipboard and trains and such. We might as well talk as sit and silently cry. My name's Moore—Gordon Moore, at your service!"

"Mine's Paige. Catherine Paige. But I wasn't crying!"

"Of course you weren't!"

"But I felt a little like it, just before you spoke," she admitted, dimpling again.

"I thought you looked a little low."

"Oh, I'm not low! It's really just the opposite . . . that is . . ." All Cathie's training warned her against talking to strangers. It wasn't the thing to do at all. Ma'd be ashamed of her . . . and here she was, on the point of telling everything that was on her mind . . .

"That is," he prompted.

Encouraged
Moore Thinks She Will Succeed

"Well, I think I have the job," she finished impulsively, scanning his face with her guileless, clear blue eyes, "but that's the trouble with me, do you see? I'm always thinking something wonderful is going to happen, and half the time it doesn't. It has never happened yet and—"

"It will this time. I'm sure of it."

"Oh! What makes you think that? Do you really think that I . . . that they . . . I mean, Mr. Farnsworth—"

"Absolutely. I know Farnsworth. He'll like you."

A long sigh escaped her. "Truly? You really think—"

"I'm sure of it."

The lovely smile lit her face again, illuminating it. "Oh, I hope you're right!" She laid a slim eager hand on his sleeve. "It means so much. I was just sure of it, at first, when I first came in. I—I could hardly wait to see him, to get home to tell the family I had it. And then I got to thinking. Why, when I first started looking for work I used to have my first month's pay all spent in my head before I ever saw the place and when I did they always had somebody else to try out first and so did you ever have to look for a job?"

He grinned. "Yes, but not lately. I work for my brother. A brother can't very well fire you, do you see?"

Nobody would DARE to fire you!" she thought, studying his thin aristocratic face, with its high-bridged nose and arrogant, thin-lipped mouth. And before she could think of a reply the door that she had watched for so long opened and a thick-set elderly man looked into the waiting room and beckoned to Moore. "Come in. Sorry to have kept you waiting. It was unavoidable."

In the doorway to the inner office Gordon Moore turned back to Cathie and smiled.

"Good luck!" he said.

Cathie settled back in her chair. After a long time the gray-haired man opened the door again. "I can see you now," he said pleasantly.

Cathie followed him, hoping she wouldn't be too scared to talk. She had forgotten all the things she had planned to say. That's what comes of having to wait so long and making a silly of yourself over a good looking young man who really doesn't care a thing about you . . . and letting yourself imagine all kinds of crazy things . . . and forgetting what you came for, and how much it matters . . . how much it matters . . .

Successful
Cathie Overjoyed When She Gets Job

Her troubled thoughts scampered ahead of her, her throat felt dry. But she must have answered the questions put to her more intelligently than she knew, for Mr. Farnsworth had risen. "Tomorrow at 9, then," he was saying.

She had the job!

Somehow she got downstairs, out of the building, into the street. She felt dizzy with excitement and relief. She had a job, she had a job, she had a job! Her heart sang it. The very traffic in the street hummed it.

A job! Oh, the blessed relief. Oh, how happy she ought to be . . . but she wasn't exactly. Tomorrow she would be, of course, and tonight, after she'd got home and had a chance to get that man out of her head. Funny, his speaking to her that way . . . ally! To keep thinking about him, instead of . . . of other things . . . home . . . ma . . . the job . . .

She hesitated for a moment, a little confused by the rushing crowd, the noise, her own mounting excitement. Now which way for the Haight street car?

"Did you get it?"

His voice. The voice of the man in the office. Cathie blushed to the roots of her hair, turned, looked full into the thin, aristocratic face of Gordon Moore. He'd been waiting . . . waiting for her . . . waiting to see if she . . .

"Oh, yes!" she cried. "I got it!" And her small flushed face was lit again with the poignant beauty of her amazing, gorgeous smile.

"I got what I went after, too. How about celebrating?" He was smiling back at her quizzically. His arm half encircled her, to protect her from the hurrying crowd.

"Celebrating?" There had been little of celebrating in Cathie's short life.

"Yes. Lunch, at one of the big hotels. How about the one on the hill?"

"Lunch?" So it was lunch time. Cathie hadn't known. She didn't care now. She didn't care if she ever ate again. He had waited for her, and she had the job, and they were going to celebrate . . .

"Oh, I'd love to!" she cried, and laughed aloud, triumphantly. She oughn't to go, but she was going to. It was a chance . . . her first real chance for . . . oh, for everything! She wouldn't miss it! Not she!

And as she stepped into the taxi, a real taxi, and Gordon Moore stepped in beside her, she thought, "It won't take long. I'll be home soon . . . I've got to go! Why, it may change my whole life!"

Japan Exports to America Decline

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Exports from Japan proper to the United States during the first six months of 1930 were valued at $108,872,000 as against $185,294,000 for the corresponding period in 1929, Commerce Department announced.

Gabriel Company Named in Suit

CLEVELAND, Aug. 25.—Pre-Inc., of Indianapolis, has filed suit in Federal Court against the Gabriel Company, formerly Gabriel Snubber Manufacturing Company, charging infringement on shock absorbers covered by patent number 1135391 which is held by plaintiff.

Original patent, it is alleged by the plaintiff, was granted April 13, 1915, to Christian Alfred Paterson and is now held by Pre-Loading Prevention Devices, Inc.

Suit claims the Gabriel Company has willfully and knowingly violated the patents having been notified of such as early as 1927 and by so doing has damaged plaintiff in amounts over $500,000.

Petition asks for a preliminary and permanent injunction and an accounting of damages due the plaintiff.

TIDEWATER OIL NET INCOME HIGHER

Gross Earnings Decline, But Company Makes Big Cut In Operating Expenses

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Featuring the report of Tide Water Associated Oil Company for the six months ended June 30 was the drastic reduction in operating expenses compared with the similar 1929 period.

Due to lower prices for oil products and intensified marketing competition affecting the two constituent companies, Associated Oil Company on the Pacific Coast and Tide Water Oil Company in the eastern states, gross sales on a consolidated basis recorded a sizeable decline from last year. This was offset by a reduction in operating charges.

Gross sales dropped to $73,291,546 in the first six months this year from $83,210,003 in the corresponding 1929 period, a contraction of 11.9 per cent. At the same time expenses were 13.3 per cent lower, declining to $61,865,882 from $71,380,963.

EXPENSES REDUCED

Due to this curtailment of expenditures in the operation of the company's business, net profit after all deductions, including reserves and taxes, presented a highly creditable showing. In a period which has witnessed reduced earnings for the majority of oil companies, Tide Water Associated increased its net profit available for dividends to $5,595,635, which was equivalent to 58 cents a share on 5,843,937 shares of no-par common stock after dividend requirements on the 6 per cent preferred.

In the first six months of last year net profit on the same basis was $5,042,020, equal to 56 cents a share on 5,098,310 common shares then outstanding.

The annual dividend rate of 60 cents on the common was almost entirely covered in the first six months' operations. When directors met in December, last, they declared two semi-annual dividends of 30 cents each, one of which was paid February 15 and the other August 15 this year. This action marked the resumption of payments on the Tide Water Associated common after a lapse of two years.

PRICE WAR HURT

Both Tide Water Oil Company and Associated Oil Company reduced their operating costs, the latter company particularly. Opposition of the Associated Oil management to continuance of gasoline deliveries on an unprofitable basis led to a marked reduction in shipments to the Atlantic seaboard.

The volume of domestic sales of gasoline as a whole, however, reflected an increase for the period for Associated, but this favorable factor was nullified to some extent by the price war waged on the Pacific Coast during the latter portion of the half-year. Gasoline prices were restored to a stable basis on July 12.

At the close of June the current position of the Tide Water Associated Oil Company was strong, current assets of $71,469,382 comparing with current liabilities of $12,524,911, with working capital at $58,944,471.

WEST'N PACIFIC EXTENSION SOUGHT

Road Asks All-Rail Entrance To Frisco Instead of the Present Ferry on Bay

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Western Pacific Railway stands to benefit substantially from recent developments before the Interstate Commerce Commission, including its extension proposals.

The road, together with the Great Northern, won a substantial victory over the Southern Pacific when the commission approved their joint proposal to build 200 miles of new line between Klamath Falls, Ore., and Keddie, Calif. This authorization will put the strong Great Northern line into San Francisco as an ally of the Western Pacific.

Recent tentative report by a commission examiner recommends approval of the Western Pacific proposal to build an all rail entrance into San Francisco in lieu of its present and less desirable ferry service across San Francisco Bay from its rail head on the northern shore.

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

The present outlook is that the commission will sanction the all-rail entrance proposal. The prospect is especially favorable in view of the previous ruling in the Klamath Falls extension case, which puts the Great Northern into San Francisco over the Western Pacific.

All-rail entrance proposal of the Western Pacific contemplates construction of a line from its present rails in the San Francisco business district back along the bay to Redwood City and across to a connection with its main line at Niles.

Consummation of these projects would make the Western Pacific an integral part of the new transcontinental and northwestern routes, which will be opened by the Great Northern.

The slow and uncertain barge service of the present Western Pacific facilities puts the road at a constant disadvantage of several hours in San Francisco in comparison with the Southern Pacific.

NEW RAIL ENTRANCE

Examiner's report on the all rail entrance proposition points out improvements and extensions by the Southern Pacific clearly indicate the need of the Western Pacific and its transcontinental system of an all-rail route into San Francisco. Such a route, the report further declared, would be a powerful stimulus to the acquisition of new traffic not only by the Western Pacific, but also by the Denver and Rio Grande Western and its eastern connections, as it would enable them to compete with the Southern Pacific on more nearly equal terms.

A final decision by the commission upon the all-rail entrance proposal is a long way off and not likely much before late winter or early spring. Under commission procedure, exceptions to the examiner's tentative report will be argued before the full commission this fall and the case submitted for final decision.

VENEZUELA OIL YIELD HIGHER

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Crude oil production in Venezuela during July averaged 374,970 barrels a day, compared with 378,708 barrels daily in June and 348,170 barrels daily in July, 1929, according to O'Shaughnessy's Oil Report.

Venezuelan Oil Concessions, Ltd., was the leading oil producer of the country, with a daily average output of 108,280 barrels, an increase of 414 barrels over daily average in previous month but 5,051 barrels a day less than July, 1929, output. Lago Oil and Transport Corporation's output of 105,610 barrels daily was a decrease of 9,968 barrels from June's daily average, but a gain of 17,654 barrels daily over output in July last year.

Studebaker Motor Registrations Gain

Total registration of new automobiles in 37 states reporting for July show Studebaker in fifth place among all makes, according to a compilation issued today by the corporation. During the first six months of the year, before the introduction of the free wheeling models, Studebaker ranked tenth in total registrations in the same states.

In Illinois, California and Arizona, Studebaker registrations were exceeded only by Ford and Chevrolet, while in Maryland, Indiana and Alabama Studebaker registrations ranked fourth. Improvement of sales position is reported from numerous metropolitan centers including New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

Aviation Corporation Business Increases

Colonial Airways, subsidiary of Aviation Corporation of Delaware, in July carried 1,370 passengers over its lines against 1,193 in June, making a total of 8,001 handled between New York and Boston during the first seven months this year.

The Universal division carried 175,492 pounds of air mail and 17,091 passengers in the first seven months, or more than double the business in the corresponding period last year, according to Halsey Dunwoody, executive vice president.

APPLE EXPORTS DECLINE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—About 12 per cent of the total 1929-30 United States commercial apple crop was exported, compared with 20 per cent of the 1928-29 crop, Department of Agriculture states. Of the apples exported in barrels during the 1929-30 season 67 per cent went to the United Kingdom and 18 per cent to the continent.

Apple exports from the United States for the 1929-30 season totaled 1,427,000 barrels and 5,998,000 boxes, compared with 3,005,000 barrels and 12,027,000 boxes for 1928-29 and 2,438,000 barrels and 7,161,000 boxes for the five-year average 1924-25 to 1928-29.

Apples and pear crops of the new season on the continent of Europe are likely to be poorer in both quantity and quality than earlier reports indicated, Agricultural Commissioner L. V. Steere at Berlin reports to the department. The apple crop on the whole should be considerably below average and far below that of last year. This is particularly true in the most important competitive districts. Pears are expected to be light, particularly the winter varieties.

Exchange of Stock In Utility Deal

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Atlas Utilities Corporation announced acquisition of in excess of 80 per cent of the capital stock of Exide Securities Corporation, and has elected to exercise options for exchange of stock on the basis of one share of Exide Securities stock for either nine-twentieths of a share of $3 preference stock, series A, of Atlas Utilities Corporation, or 2¼ shares of Atlas Utilities common.

Driver Wrecks His Truck to Save Boy

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 25.—James Williams, 19, driver of a Mutual Foundry Company truck, wrecked his machine on the Lakes-to-Sea highway near Meadville, when a newsboy, delivering papers on a scooter, crossed the road in front of his car.

Williams avoided hitting the boy and two cars ahead, escaping with bruises as his truck careened against a telephone pole.

DORMANT AUTO DEMAND SEEN BY SLOAN

Motors Chief Optimistic In Spite of Uncertain Outlook for Rest of 1930

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, told me he believes a pent-up demand for automobiles is accumulating during the current recession and that he is a bull on the industry for a long pull.

As for unfavorable prospects, the head of the largest company making a diversified line of automotive and related products said:

Mr Rukeyser.

"It is against our policy to deal with forecasts, and a statement regarding sales or profits for General Motors or for any other company is in that category. So far as the general sales and profit situation is concerned, however, I think I should have to say that I am a 'bull' on the motor industry for a long pull.

SECOND HALF UNCERTAIN.

"I feel that the second half of the year is more or less uncertain, not only account of anything within the industry certain, not only on account of the perfectly evident and fully recognized business recession through which we are passing. I do not think that there is yet any tangible evidence for an improvement in the near future. That, as I see the picture, is generally conceded.

"We are getting well into the third quarter and, naturally, a business improvement takes time to get under way and develop momentum, therefore I hardly look for an improvement to be very helpful for the second half, especially dealing with the fourth quarter, when the motor car industry, due to the seasonal trend, is at the low point for the year."

PRICE TREND TEMPORARY.

As to whether the increasing preference for low-priced cars was only a temporary effect of the business recession, Mr. Sloan said:

"I think that the increasing preference for the low-price car is only, in a measure, a temporary effect of the present business recession.

"It is due, in addition to the latter, to the fact that values in the lower price cars are so extraordinarily great, naturally, as we pass out of the present industrial reaction, the trend will adjust itself more in line with what it was a year or so ago. It will not necessarily—as a matter of fact, I do not think it will—entirely go back to the previous relationship."

RESTRAINED DEMAND.

Asked whether the decision of motorists to drive their old cars longer resulted in a pent-up demand, the head of the General Motors answered:

"I think there is likely to be a pent-up demand in times like these, an account of motorists driving their older cars longer from the standpoint of economy, and with a readjustment of business conditions this is bound, at least in degree, to make itself felt.

"I might say further that over a term of years all these things naturally adjust themselves. If business is abnormally good some years it is likely to be not so good in others. In other words, I believe that industry works along very definite trends, and in a country like ours naturally the trend over a long enough period must be distinctly upward."

OPERATIONS CUT.

As for changes within the company, Mr. Sloan said:

"Like all industrial organizations, we have had to adjust our operations in line with the reduced scale of business effected by the industrial recession through which we are passing. In addition to and entirely aside from this, I should say that technological efficiency was more or less increasing all the time, creating a problem which we all recognize is now before us.

"We have not changed our hourly wage rates and have no desire to do so. Neither do we think from the standpoint of general prosperity it is the right thing to do."

Queried about what can be done to stimulate exports, Mr. Sloan said:

"I feel that sooner or later there has got to be a more fundamental understanding of the relation between exports and imports, which brings up the question of the tariff, which as you appreciate, is a very involved question. Outside of this I can't suggest anything that will serve to increase export sales. As you of course know, the purchasing power of practically all the important motor-consuming markets in the world has been tremendously curtailed, and, due to the low commodity prices, we cannot expect much of an improvement until an improvement takes place in that direction."

July Income Tax Receipts Decline

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—July income tax receipts amounted to $29,699,017, a decrease of $5,036,823 from July, 1929. The decrease in individual income taxes was $3,705,470 and in corporation taxes $1,331,352.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

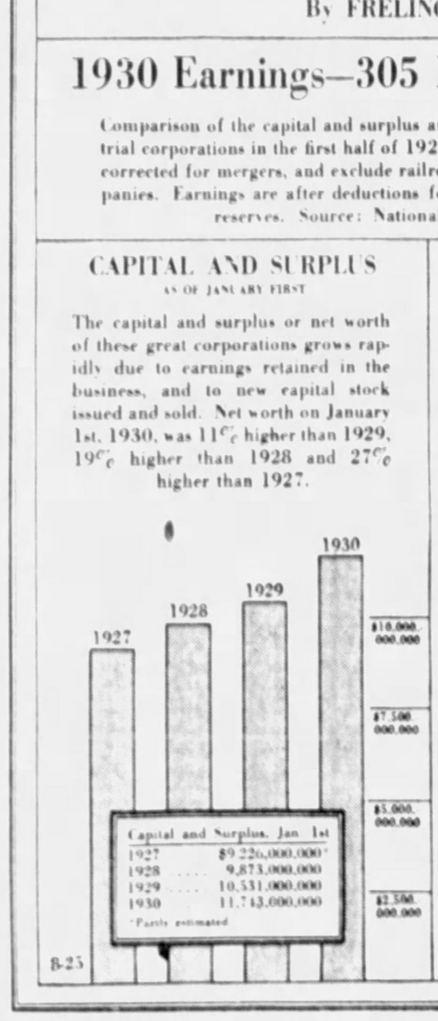
1930 Earnings—305 Large Corporations

Comparison of the capital and surplus and the net earnings of 305 great industrial corporations in the first half of 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930. Figures are corrected for mergers, and exclude railroads, public utilities and financial companies. Earnings are after deductions for all expenses, fixed charges and tax reserves. Source: National City Bank of New York.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS

AS OF JANUARY FIRST

The capital and surplus or net worth of these great corporations grows rapidly due to earnings retained in the business, and to new capital stock issued and sold. Net worth on January 1st, 1930, was 11% higher than 1929, 19% higher than 1928 and 27% higher than 1927.



NET EARNINGS

FIRST SIX MONTHS

1930 earnings were 25% under 1929, 3% under 1928, but 3% over 1927. So they are back to a more normal basis. Moreover they give a return of 5.6% on capital and surplus (which is at the rate of more than 10% for 12 months), thereby showing that these companies still have high earning ability this year.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The forward movement last week which carried the bond market to a new high level for the year slowed down today. Only nominal interest was displayed in fixed income securities and the general tone was steady.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25. (AP)—Tabulations of the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, compiled by the Associated Press; sales in dollars and high, low and last quotations:

DAILY TRUE STORY

"The Ride"

"It sure is a grand and glorious day," Pete Stark said as he leaned against the wide doorway of the Planet Auto Sales Company's service shop.

"Yeah?"

Sig Matthews scowled out into the sunshine. It was no great and glorious day for him. Everything had been going wrong.

When he left Hale's Corners to go to the city and sell cars for the Planet company everything had seemed "grand and glorious."

A year of it in the city and Sig was just about ready to admit that he was no success and probably never would be one.

"Sure it's a great day," Pete insisted. "What you grouching for, Sig?"

"Everything. The boss says it's my fault the new sedan got smashed. He's taking the repair cost out of my drawing account!"

"That ain't right," Pete admitted.

"I tried to tell him, but he wouldn't listen. He said I should have brought the car in, and I explained that you couldn't have got a kiddie car inside at that time, and you couldn't. What do you suppose he said to that?"

"Th' boss is likely to say anything, Sig."

He said I should have brought the car in."

"Yeah? And you just told him th' place was full?"

"Sure, but—"

"What's the matter, Matthews, haven't you any prospects?" It was Smith, owner of the Planet Sales establishment.

"I have an appointment in an hour, Mr. Smith," Sig answered.

"You might be scouting around in that hour—never can tell when you'll run into a sale."

"Yes, sir. But I came out here to find out how much the repairs on that car would cost."

To Be Dismissed

"Plenty, so you'd better hustle and sell a few cars to square it."

Sig Matthews got into his demonstration car and drove away. His thoughts were as black as the enamel on the fenders of the car.

Smith went back to his office and spoke to Mrs. Lane, his secretary and bookkeeper.

"When Matthews gets the damages on that sedan squared up, give him his notice—he's not a very hot salesman," he said.

Mrs. Lane nodded. She didn't like Smith any more than Sig. Few of the employes were in any degree fond of him.

When she got a chance she tipped Sig, because she liked him.

"Don't let on, Sig, or Smith would fire me," she said, "but I thought I'd tip you, so you can be looking around for another job."

"I'm greatly obliged, Mrs. Lane, but I guess I'm out of luck. Wouldn't do any better anywhere else," Sig said, despondingly.

Sig sold a car that day. By rights his share should have been $60, cash, because he had already earned more than his drawing account.

Smith said: "Well, Matthews, it's going to cost $190 to fix that sedan you let get smashed. This sale cuts it down to $130."

Sig wanted to say: "Yes, and when it's all paid for I'm to be rewarded by being fired," but that would get Mrs. Lane in bad. So he said, "All right, boss."

Sig Matthews had fully expected that he would earn enough in six months to go back and buy the Hale's Corners Garage, for with it went the agency of two popular cars.

Old Ezra Stebbins would take a thousand down and the balance on plenty of time. There were other garages in other towns, to be sure, but other towns had no Nellie Johnsons.

"Just as soon as I save up that thousand, Nellie," Sig had said, "I'll get the garage and agency and make plenty of money, then we can be married."

"Will it take long, Sig?" she had asked.

"Not more than six months."

Nellie sighed. Six months seemed a long, long while.

That was a year ago. Sig Matthews had been able to save only 300. At this rate, he figured, it would take him three years!

And now he was to work to pay damages he didn't cause and then be fired after this was done.

Admits Failure

He sat in his room and scowled out over the littered back yards. Nellie's most recent letter had contained some very pointed questions as to when Sig would be able to buy the garage.

Ezra Stebbins was her uncle. She had a lot of inside information.

"Uncle Ezra," she wrote, "has had lots of chances to sell his garage. He's sort of waiting for you on my account, but I'm afraid he won't wait no longer. He asked me yesterday about you and said that perhaps you'd decided to live in the city and had found another girl."

With a sigh Sig sat down at the wabbly little table to write to Nellie.

He wrote three letters, and destroyed them.

He just couldn't admit to her that he was a failure in the city. He knew that back home in Hale's Corners it would be different.

Finally he wrote her that he hated the city and never would have any other girl, but he guessed she'd never forgive him because he was a flat failure.

He decided to let the letter remain until morning and see if he could get courage to mail it.

He overslept and rushed out to breakfast and work, leaving the letter in the writing pad.

He had a good prospect for a sale this day. This was for one of the expensive cars. If he sold it he'd have that debt nearly squared.

Sig drove out to the suburbs and demonstrated the car. The man liked it immensely.

"We'll drive around to the house and let the wife take a look at it," he said.

The wife took one look at it.

"It's a hideous color," she said. "I detest that color. I wouldn't ride in it."

It comes in a green and gray," Sig said hopefully.

"Worse," she said. "I want a nice rich maroon, just like Mrs. Kent's car."

"Her car," the man informed her, "cost fifteen hundred more than this."

"I don't care. I want one like hers."

"That's out," he said.

She made no reply in words but she sniffed and glared at her husband.

"We'll ride in the old car another year," he said.

"All right," the wife declared, whereupon her husband grinned with relief.

"Sorry," he lied to Sig. "Would like to have you make the sale, but you heard."

Gets Break

Sig heard. He drove away. He had wasted most of the day and it was the last day of the week. Room rent to pay, and then he'd have but a little left. He wouldn't dig into his saved three hundred, although it might just as well be three cents—old Ezra wouldn't take a penny less than a thousand down.

His boss actually smiled when he drove in.

"I'll turn something your way, Matthews," he said.

Sig was sore. He wanted to say, "And take it yourself," but he had to be diplomatic.

"I promised to take Hen Shaw out in a King Planet at 7 tonight, and I can't get away from a house party my wife is having. You take him out for a demonstration. Matthews. If he buys, half the commission goes to you. If he doesn't buy, I'll allow you something for overtime. All the boys have gone."

"Where will I find him, Boss?" Sig asked.

"Oh, yes, don't go to his home, he wants to surprise his wife with a new car, if he gets one at all. He will probably buy from me, as we're great pals. You'll find him at this place."

Smith gave Sig a card, advertising the "Golden Lion," a rather notorious night club.

The boss departed. Sig hung around to kill time and finally started for the "Golden Lion."

The King Planet was their costliest car. Sig had never sold one. He hadn't demonstrated one half a dozen times. Half the commission on such a sale would be better than what he'd make selling three Junior Planets.

He parked easily in front of the "Golden Lion." A doorman was talking with someone and looking at a well-dressed short dark man standing in a doorway. The man was swaying. There was no question but what he was decidedly drunk.

"Never seen Henshaw lit like this before," Sig heard the doorman say.

Sig stepped out and went to the doorman.

"Is that Hen Shaw?" he asked.

"Yes. You a friend of his? Better get him away—lots of guys would like to find him like this."

Sig was delighted. He believed that he could close a sale easily with a man as thoroughly plastered as that. He went over and took him by the arm.

"Came to take you for that ride that was promised you," Sig said.

Man Surprised

The man swayed and stared at him.

"Come on," Sig urged. He steered the man into the car alongside of him and drove away.

"How about it?" Sig asked after he had driven up through the parkway and into the country.

The man was asleep. Sig shook him. The man woke up and stared around him seemingly surprised.

"Hey, what's this?" he asked.

"I'm taking you for a ride," Sig told him.

The man stared at him and seemed to turn pale. He was silent for fully five minutes.

"Caught me without my gat, didn't you, buddy? Well, suppose I peel off ten grand—on th' level I'm not reaching for the rod——"

He pulled out an immense flat packet of money.

"Ten grand, right here, to let me slip out and do the disappearing act—what do you say?"

Sig stopped the car.

"Give me," he said.

He got the money. The man stepped out and disappeared in the shrubbery.

Now Sig Matthews owns the Hale's Corners Garage, is prospering and married to Nellie.

Mr. Hen, or Henry, Shaw gave Smith an awful bawling out for not coming to show the car.

And "Shorty" Henshaw, leader of the Henshaw gangsters, still tells how he bought off a rival who was "taking him for a ride."

Things of interest are happening all about us if we are alert enough to see them. For example, consider the following items, all of which appear in a single issue of the Ashland, Ohio, Gazette, under the heading of "Keener's Run Correspondence by Charles Shutt"—

Doc. Diddle, south of the Run, Mrs. Shirley Diddle and two daughters, Helen and Nell from the same place, were all seen crossing Keener's Run last Monday.

Doc. Diddle south of the Run, stopped at your Scribe's home Tuesday.

Mrs. Shirley Diddle and two daughters from south of the Run were doing some shopping Tuesday.

Doc. Diddle was seen crossing Keener's Run Wednesday.

Doc. Diddle, wife and two daughters, Helen and Nell, south of the Run, was away Thursday evening and on their way home stopped and talked to your Scribe a few minutes.

The parties that drew the gas out of Doc Diddle's car had better come and settle before the grand jury meets. Doc. knows who you are and will make it hot for you if you don't settle it before long.

Mrs. Shirley Diddle, from south of the Run and two children, Helen and Nell, and Doc. Diddle, south of the Run, were all seen crossing Keener's Run Friday.

SOUR NOTE FOR THE LUTE

While watching goofs play baby golf
I always feel disposed to laugh
To think that exercise so slight
Can give poor humans such delight,
And though I'd like to play, I fear
To face my own derisive sneer;
For to be thus well entertained
Would leave my ego bruised and pained.

RACKETS AND RACKETEERS

NOTE—This is the third of a series of articles on the men who have achieved renown in the underworld.

THIS sociological treatise on social, economic and criminological aspects of racketeering would indeed be derelict if it failed to chronicle the refractory exploits of that dangerous nuisance — Giblitch Giblitchowitch, known and feared in a dozen cities as Giblitch Giglitchowitch.

Giblitch headed the "Giblitch Gang." His father was an obscure floor walker named Giblitch Giblitchowitch, who captained a gang of a thousand hoodlum floorwalkers known as the "Giblitch Mob." His mother's name was Mrs. Giblitch Giblitchowitch.

Giblitch Giblitchowitch.

Floorwalker gangs are more dangerous, perhaps, than any other thugs that terrorize the public. Politically corrupt and socially unbalanced, they will stop at nothing to annoy women and children.

Old Giblitchowitch, it is said, used to put a carnation in his lapel, and wear a cutaway coat, and then stand near the elevators in department stores until a victim came along. Asked a civil question, he would suddenly fly into a rage, and sneer at the surprised victim with actual loathing. He would stamp and shout, and knock the packages from the hands of the bewildered customer. Then he would pretend to pick up the packages, but when the unimaginative victim reached home, she was likely to find only one stocking in the package which Giblitchowitch had first knocked from her hand, and then picked up with mock courtesy.

So, when this meanie-weenie became a father, everyone asked if the tiny tot would grow up to be a perfumed old roughneck like his father, and the answer will be found in tomorrow's issue of this paper by those who are anxious to learn all they can and thus fit themselves for greater responsibilities, higher wages and positions of trust and respect in their respective neighborhoods.

Controlled Wards Also Are Partly Responsible

In his address before the Rotary Club of Oil City the other day, Robert Garland, Pittsburgh councilman, laid the blame for the prevalence of the Clearing House lottery and other such rackets in the great cities at the door of apathetic citizens. There is no doubt that the failure of large numbers of citizens to vote is responsible for existing conditions. If those who neglect their civic duties were to go to the polls there is strong probability that we should have in public office men with higher standards of honesty and a higher conception of their obligations to the citizenship; consequently we should have less corruption in municipal government.

If the voters who favor things as they are, and those who favor better things, were numerically equal, and then the other element, the citizens who habitually neglect to vote, were to be persuaded to go to the polls, there is good reason to believe they would cast their ballots in favor of improvement. That is to say, if the people who shirk their duty could be induced to vote, the forces of decency and honesty would easily prevail over the racketeers and their supporters. On that theory, the workers for civic betterment have concentrated their efforts for years on campaigns to arouse the lethargic citizens from their apathy.

But there is another way through which the forces of decency might prevail without the help of the shirkers, and that is by winning over to their side voters who are usually on the other side. They are to be found chiefly in the controlled wards, so-called because in those wards citizens vote with astonishing unanimity according to the dictation of their political leaders—in Pittsburgh the Republican ward chairmen. These ward leaders seem to have the vote of their wards in the hollow of their hands—they can cast it as they like. They can induce their followers to vote for good candidates as readily as for bad.

The secret of the ward leaders' astonishing power, so mysterious to the independent voters in other wards, lies in their constantly maintaining personal, friendly contact with the voters. In the controlled wards nearly every voter is personally acquainted with the ward chairman or his lieutenants, while in the independent wards many residents may not even know the chairman's name.

The people in the controlled wards are mostly folk in modest circumstances, workingmen and their families, easy of access and appreciative of the friendly interest shown in their affairs. The ward leaders and their lieutenants look after the welfare of their people, helping them in time of trouble, and thereby win their unfailing allegiance. When these leaders, through their wonderfully efficient organizations, pass along the word to vote for any particular candidate, they receive unquestioning obedience.

In theory, at least, it should be possible for the forces of decency to obtain control of such wards in the same way. The difficulty is that the ward leaders now in control are in politics for what they can get out of it for themselves in the way of jobs, contracts, privileges and concessions, while the element that frowns on rackets could offer its ward leaders little else, perhaps, but such satisfaction as they might get from seeing the city honestly governed.

Here Is a Record for Motorists to Shoot At

A good many automobile mechanics probably would have to find other jobs if all motorists drove their cars as many miles without accident as the drivers on the Philadelphia division of the Greyhound Bus Lines. The company's director of safety and personnel reports that in July it established a record of 56,168 miles per accident, and during the first week of August raised the mark to 100,000 miles per accident. He says, furthermore, that any mishap that results in no more than a scratched fender is counted as an accident and placed in the statistics.

How many miles do you drive a car, Mr. Motorist, before you are ready for a new one? For the average driver, 25,000 miles is probably not a bad guess. It is certain that there are comparatively few persons who never so much as scratch the fenders of their machines during those 25,000 miles of driving; yet at the Greyhound rate they would have only one mishap for every four cars operated. To put it another way, if the average driver runs his car 10,000 miles a year, he would only have an accident, at the Greyhound rate, once in 10 years.

How liability insurance rates would drop if one accident per 100,000 miles were the common ratio!

All Should Have Hobby; Fish Are Interesting

The annual show of the Allegheny Aquarists' Association, which is being held this week in the Phipps Conservatory in Schenley Park, directs attention to a fascinating hobby that has become remarkably popular in Pittsburgh in recent years.

It has not been many years since about the only kind of fish that one would find in the ordinary aquarium were gold fish. But at the Schenley Park show more than 100 kinds of tropical fish are being exhibited. In the brilliance of their colors some of them suggest living jewels.

Everyone should have a hobby—a study or occupation or pastime to which to turn for relief from the dullness of the workaday world. All cannot cultivate a garden or play golf or collect curios or study the fine arts, but everyone can have an aquarium. Bowls of goldfish are often on sale at the five-and-ten-cent stores; they are sometimes given away as premiums by drug stores. And from such a humble beginning the aquarist has endless possibilities for development.

A well-kept aquarium brightens a home like a pot of flowers, and when the aquarist turns to breeding fish he has an inexhaustible source of entertainment.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

New Traffic System

An outrage has just been fabricated on the semi-transparent traffic police of Manhattan, an island near the Statue of Liberty which holds its torch so high that it warms nobody and heats nothing.

They have taken away the whistles from the jam gendarmes. And have given them no musical instruments to replace them.

"Bugs" Baer

For over 10 years the vehicular board of directors has twittered and warbled sweet nothings at Sunday drivers. And for over 10 years the holiday chauffeurs have had their detours brightened by mechanical operettas and birdlike calls.

The first suspicion that all was not well was when Commissioner Mulrooney saw one of the finest directing traffic with a baton like Wagner or Sousa.

Mulrooney knew he had to stop that before his police started toe-dancing during banking hours.

The commissioner called his men together and said, "Boys, I've got sinister news for you. You've been tooting those whistles so long you are starting to talk the language of birds. If this continues you are liable to demand sunflower seeds with your meals and sleep with your heads under your arms.

"I know that you are all experts on those whistles. But tweeting at a flivver is like carrying chips to a lumber camp.

"When a flivver driver hears a whistle he thinks its just another canary in his chassis."

So all the saddened police took their whistles down to City Hall square and threw them into one big heap larger than the Woolworth tower and more melodious than a church organ.

From now on the Manhattan students will depend on their hands encased in white gloves resembling dignified pillow cases.

There is plenty of authority in a mammoth white glove stretched to the bursting point. It has the law, the city, the state and the government in back of it. And also hides most of the horizon.

When you see that white-washed hand sticking out like a brand new bass drum you are bound to yank the emergency brake and fold your car up like an opera hat.

No longer will busy street crossings resound to shrill repartee like the parrot house in the zoo.

After dark the white gloves will be dipped in phosphorescent paint and tourists will not know whether they are looking at a giant catcher's mitt or whether the state capital has been illuminated in their honor.

Anything that eliminates noise is a putt on the correct miniature golf course. But we advise no traffic officer to hold up both hands as some chauffeur is liable to run between them.

TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

By Archibald Henderson

The edge of excitement over trans-Atlantic flights has been somewhat dulled since the stupendous thrill of Lindbergh's spectacular achievement. It was Kipling who said that he travels fastest who travels alone. But it is highly doubtful if any more solitary trans-Atlantic flights will be attempted. The hazards are too great and the human strain is too oppressive.

Although we have become habituated to the triumph of bridging the Atlantic by air, the difficulties, stresses and hazards of the flight have scarcely been minimized or decreased in any appreciable measure. Kingsford-Smith and his companions, the latest to triumph, were probably saved from disaster, not so much by their skill as aviators, exceptional as this was, but by the fortunate functioning of the radio apparatus. And this, too, when the goal was almost in sight. The Byrd flight narrowly escaped disaster, the inability to locate their position almost preventing the possibility of effecting a landing.

Every plane which is set for trans-Atlantic flight suffers the initial handicap of overweight. The load of fuel and other things is always excessive, because a wide margin of safety has to be maintained. This requires a large reserve supply of fuel to be carried against many contingencies, leaking pipes and reservoirs, defective feed lines, the possibility of being lost, the danger of head winds causing delay, and many other hazards. The difficulties in raising the plane from the ground at the take-off are not to be exaggerated. Valuable lives have been lost at the take-off, and Lindbergh's flight missed happening by the veriest hair's breadth.

The damages and uncertainties of flight cannot be exaggerated. There is the terrible, blinding fog—impenetrable, mysterious and menacing. "There was nothing more awe-inspiring," wrote Chamberlin and Levine, "nothing more uncanny on the entire trip than the hours during which we were flying through dense masses of fog, often absolutely unaware where we might be or what we might strike at the next moment. Fog in daytime was bad enough, but it was far worse at night, when we were roaring along without seeing anything except the blue flame from the exhaust pipes, which you don't notice at all in the daylight."

And always the menace of sleet and snow, the ice forming on the plane—threatening descent and a watery grave. Surely these trans-Atlantic aviators fully deserve the title of "knights of the air."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Life isn't outside you—something that is happening TO you. Life is inside you—something that is happening IN you.

All that happens outside you is just so much scenery. Your home is scenery. Your job is scenery. The events of the day are scenery. Even your loved ones are scenery.

These things seem very real to you. You find joy and pride in them. If you were to write your autobiography, you would certainly describe them as your life. But they are not your life. Your real life, upon which all your joy or misery depends, is not this procession of outward events. It is YOUR REACTION to such events.

. . . IT IS THE SECRET STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS WITHIN YOU.

Stop a minute. Be still. What do you feel? You feel your shoes—the chair. You hear an automobile—the telephone. You see someone coming into the room. That is a small section of what you casually call your "life." But is isn't your life at all. Wait!

Wait until all these surface sensations—all this STATIC—ceases. Now what do you feel?

Slowly, vaguely, you become aware of a stirring, a fumbling—as though someone woke far within you. Then people and places and things drop away. You are removed from them as completely as though you had leaped through space, leaving them behind you on another star. And you become conscious of a tide within you—a vast, jumbled movement of love and hate, dreams and desire, wonder and rebellion, faith and fear. You recognize that tide. You recognize all the things in that tide. FOR YOU HAVE PUT THEM THERE. Little by little, you have built that tide—AND THAT TIDE IS YOUR LIFE. IT IS ONLY LIFE THAT COUNTS.

Why do you fall so often? Why are you so often disappointed and bewildered? Why are you buffeted about—"at the mercy of fate?" BECAUSE YOU DO NOT REALIZE THAT TRUTH. You do not realize that life in INSIDE you—and that you must build your happiness and wisdom and strength and "luck" INSIDE you. Instead, you think that life lies OUTSIDE you. And you seek, through love and pleasure and work and possessions to find good fortune in that outside life. It can't be done and you're doomed to fury and frustration if you try.

You might as well try to build a home upon the fleeting, unsubstantial vision glimpsed from a car window. For you have no real claim to or control over that outer world. You can't break through into it—it can't break through into you. But you can make that inner life what you wish it to be.

No outside person can make you happy. But you can find happiness INSIDE yourself, if you will put yourself in order. No outside person, however beloved, can conquer your loneliness. But you can find comfort for your loneliness INSIDE yourself, if you will put yourself in balance. And unless you do put yourself in order all the outside luck won't do you a bit of good. For, though you INHABIT a castle, you'll LIVE in dirt and desolation.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

They're reforming the prisons all over the country since the boys started putting on these big shows where they burn the pens and shoot up the guards and everything. In some places they're going to build some mighty nice residences to take the place of the old-fashioned joints the boys burned down and blew up. While they're waiting to hear from the legislature about whether there's to be two baths and television for each cell or only just one bath and refrigeration, they're examining the convicts at one of the big stirs to find out what kind of work they'd like to do.

One guy was asked to choose the sort of work he'd like to be trained in, and he says, "Well, boss, you mean I'm to choose?"

"Sure, as long as it's something we got the equipment to teach you."

"Well, boss," he says, after thinking right hard, "I'm sure I can get my friends on the outside to furnish the equipment. And I'd sorta like to learn to be a fireman in the extension ladder department. If you can't get up a class in that there work, I'd choose to run the parachute division of the aviation school."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Sanctuary

In the street there is noise unending,
There is tumult and strife and din,
With sound to the skies ascending;
But here it cannot creep in.
For the walls of the temple shield me
From the clamor of strident sound.
And here is a glimpse revealed me
Of peace and its bliss profound.

In the world there are toils and troubles
And the stress of great loads men bear,
The worry that mounts and doubles
With the follies that all men share;
But the temple is shut to sorrow,
Here is never an angry note,
Here is calm which the soul may borrow
With the cares of the throng remote.

So I come to your presence, knowing
That my need will be met and fed,
With the wine of the spirit flowing,
With the food that is more than bread.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

SECTION 3. ARE THERE FORWARD BOUNDS IN MUTATION?

Here, perhaps, we may find space for an idea that had some currency in the beginning of the century through the work of de Vries (born 1848).

It is that there are spurts, jolts, storms of mutation in the case now of this species and now of that. A stock was supposed to evolve in a series of violent efforts, first a rush of variation, then a rest, then another rush, followed by another rest, and so on.

These onward pushes, he thought supplied the greater part or all of the variational factors in evolution. They were considerable enterprises, aggressions, novelties. They might yield new species at a bound. It is as if a species or group of species, going along in a humdrum way, were to be suddenly pricked by an unaccountable whipper-in.

H. G. Wells

Recently this idea has been revised in an exaggerated and purposive form by Mr. Hilare Belloc in one of his all too rare contributions to biological discussion.

Unable to imagine how a fore limb could be transformed from a walking limb into a wing, convinced of the fact of evolution and equally convinced by the assurances of an eminent Montpellier biologist that the commonly accepted pedigree of the birds is unsound, Mr. Belloc resorted to the suggestion of a rapid series of large mutations, during which the developing birds must have led a retired and embarrassed existence, providentially escaping extinction until the new gift was attained.

Contemporary biology has no need and no evidence for this grotesque hypothesis.

The work of de Vries was based almost entirely on the behavior of one of the evening primroses (Oenothera lamarckiana) which he found growing ready to hand in Holland. It seemed to be in the throes of an evolutionary burst, throwing out all sorts of strange varieties among its offspring.

His work was already shaped out before the revival of Mendel's idea or the realization of the full significance of the chromosomes in development, and on the face of it seemed to justify his claim that a species in a stage of violent evolutionary activity might by large and abrupt mutations throw off new forms, some worthy to be classed at once as a new species, while others constituted marked new varieties.

Unhappily he had hit upon this Oenothera lamarckiana for his material and the species happen to be a very exceptional one. It is loose and inaccurate in its chromosome process to an extraordinary degree.

One of de Vries' new types was due to a duplication of all the chromosomes, giving an exceptionally large plant with four instead of two chromosome sets. The majority, however, owed their origin to the slipping of a cog in the machinery of chromosome reduction, a fault to which Oenothera, with some other plants, is particularly prone.

Sometimes both chromosomes of a pair stick together at reduction instead of separating, so that one gamete-nucleus receives both, the other none. All those with none inevitably die—they have not got a complete chromosome pack. When those with two members of a pair unite with a normal gamete, the resulting zygote has an extra chromosome, being provided with three instead of the normal two of this particular kind.

And this, of course, has an effect upon its appearance. For instance, a triplication of one particular chromosome gives rise to plants with very broad leaves.

These types, however, have no evolutionary significance, for they cannot breed true. At reduction the three chromosomes separate into two and one. If at fertilization, two meet two, the resulting zygote, overbalanced by two extra chromosomes of one kind, is unable to live.

If one meets one, the normal, original type is reconstituted; only when two meets one is the new type repeated, and this in further generations must again always throw normals.

Then owing to an extraordinary complication of lethal factors, recombinations occasionally can crop up in a previously unsuspected way, and were mistaken by de Vries for new mutations, and finally some new mutations and recombinations appeared as they do ordinarily in other plants and animals.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Diary of a modern Pepys: A note from Tom Geraghty who grows mellow about California "Where cherokee roses play tag with mocking birds." After breakfast perusing my big new Funk & Wagnall's dictionary and admiring my desk of glass and aluminum.

So resolved to keep it clear of debris which set the household laughing. Then at work picking "Ritz Carlton" out of many of our towels and Clara Bell Walsh came with her new puppy "Skippy O." a sober sided Sealyham, and I gave up labour for the day.

In the evening with Rupert Hughes to the Lambs and talked among others to Joe Weber, Lew Fields and Gene Buck and home to find young Clayton Seitz and Miss Barbara Cates, a comely lass. And Clayton is returning to San Francisco before going to London to reside, which I regret.

New York police whistle quick chirrups when autoists pass a signal. This morning on East 48th street a gorgeous lady in a roadster was halted. The cop waved his hand toward a curb, but she merely waved back merrily and shot away. The officer burst into a mile-wide grin and more such are needed in this all-too-grumpy town.

Costumers, despite a theatrical slump, are doing a fair business in rentals for dinner parties. Guests representing celebrities is a vogue. One may be outfitted, at prices from $10 to $20, to represent Amos and Andy, Greta Garbo, Helen Morgan, Will Rogers, Ed Wynn, Eddie Cantor, Nazimova, Lily Damita, Mae West and Ganna Walska.

The most popular is Greta Garbo as Anna Christie. Any thin lady with a long bob in a reddish wig, sweater, skirt and cheap satchel becomes a striking image of the Swedish star. The Garbo influence affects flappers in another way. They talk from their boots in deep bass.

An ultra-sophisticated magazine, by the way, lists the two most important celebrities in New York of the season as Harry Rosenthal, a pianist who became a successful actor, and Peter Arno, an artist. That's one idea.

Personal nomination for one of the most efficient business women in New York—Miss Helen Mayne, of 290 Park avenue.

Bowery lodging houses meet competition employing barkers. They tell of one who cries: Here you are! Nice clean room 30 cents a night. Good warm bed—man just got out of it."

It isn't a world-rocking observation but it strikes me 90 per cent of radio announcers—the target for hoots—are as interesting and certainly better mannered than the majority of radio performers.

The minor passion of [illegible] flapper who spends evening[illegible] is to pencil grotesque [illegible] and write limericks on white shirt fronts of her boy friends. If anyone protests she leaves in a huff.

Housekeeping presents problems for the novice. An employment agency yesterday sent a cook. An hour later four little children arrived to announce they "wanted to be with mama." And on top of that some person or one of the dogs has been eating sugar cookies on my bed. O, Mr. Keller!

They were talking of best remembered movie stars—the penguin-like hops of Chaplin, the startled naivette of Harold Lloyd, the funny falls of Roscoe Arbuckle, the hoydenish gaiety of Mabel Normand and the handsome physique of Wally Reid. But not one mentioned—what dyed-in-wool fans remember most vividly—the slumberous eyes of Valentino.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Some friend of yours has died suddenly.

You did not know that he was in poor health; he never complained; you thought he was in good physical condition.

You believe that he thought himself free from serious ailment.

He did not consider it necessary to have frequent physical examinations.

You feel that way in your own case.

As long as you feel fairly well you think it would be foolish to have a physician examine you.

There are times when you are bothered by certain conditions which really should alarm you, but you only take some so-called remedy you have heard of and pay little attention to it as a danger signal.

Not until your regular duties are interfered with do you consult a doctor and submit to examination and often it is too late to affect a cure.

The fate of your friend should convince you that it is unwise to put off learning from the proper source what may be the incipient stage of some disease.

Medical science might help you now and if you delay what seems a little trouble now may develop beyond the power to aid you.

It is possible to be in a serious condition and be unaware of it.
